Answer to Reich Today to Pledge Action on Insult

U. S. Reply to Promise Prosecutions in Riot at N. Y. Pier.

Question Raised As to an Apology

Intent Veiled, but Any Regrets Face Threat of Criticism.

This Government's reply to Germany's protest against an assault on the Nazi flag aboard the liner Bremen in New York harbor Friday night is expected to be handed to Dr. Rudolph Leitner, Charge d'Affaires of the Germany Embassy, today, it was learned last night at the State Department.

The reply will relate briefly the efforts of the New York police to guard the German ship and its flag against the mob, described as Communists, which staged an anti-Nazi demonstration because of the campaigns against Jews and Catholics of the Hitler regime.

The note also will point out that those who participated in tearing the swastika from its staff and throwing it into the harbor have been arrested and that they will be prosecuted promptly. Whether the reply will contain any apology—even an expression of regret—is not known.

The Germans, in their note of protest Tuesday, did not ask an apology, although they pointed out that the assault on the flag was an insult to Germany and that those involved should be prosecuted promptly. It is possible that the reply, as is usual in diplomatic corrsepondence, will follow closely the note of protest.

Criticism Possible.

The question of whether this Government should apologize for the attack on the Nazi flag has created a delicate problem for the State Department. Usually regret promptly is expressed over such incidents. But feeling over the treatment of Catholics and Jews by the Nazis has become so intense in parts of this country that the State Department may be severely criticized if it complies in this case with the usual diplomatic amenities.

Illustrative of the attitude existing not only in parts of the country, but also in Congress, Representative Samuel Dickstein (Democrat), of New York, in a speech in the House yesterday declared this Government owed no apology to Germany. He contended officers of the Bremen failed to co-operate with New York police in taking precautions against the demonstration.

Dickstein further contended the United States Government should not be held responsible "for one or two irresponsible hoodlums, even though they may be Communists." He insisted that the New York police did "everything possible" to protect the German ship and flag.

Gets Police Report.

The State Department started drafting a reply to the German protest after a report of the affair was received from the police commissioner of New York City. It is expected this report will be made public after the reply is delivered to the German Embassy.

The department has not heard from Gov. Herbert H. Lehman of New York, who was asked Tuesday to report on the Bremen incident. The Governor of a State is only an instrumentality in such incidents, however, and a report from him may not be awaited. Gov. Lehman could do no more than transmit the official police report, it was pointed out.

President Roosevelt, at his semi-weekly press conference, declined to answer questions bearing on recent outbursts of feeling against Germany in this country, except to indicate his approval of the religious tolerance sentiments expressed earlier in the week by Acting Secretary of State William Phillips in a letter to spokesmen for three Jewish organizations.

The Phillips letter, which expressed sympathy for those in Germany reported to be suffering religious persecution, was held by the President to be an ample state-

Suitor Hunted For Mutilation Of Bridegroom

Doctor Tells of Abduction and 'Operation' Before Dying at Chicago.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 31.—Police of three States tonight joined in a search for a disappointed suitor suspected of the mutilation slaying of Dr. Walter J. Bauer, 38-year-old bridegroom of three weeks.

Dr. Bauer, a chemistry technician osteopath, died early today in the Jackson Park Hospital. In a dying statement he told the police that he had been kidnaped at Ann Arbor, Mich., where he was taking a post graduate course at the University of Michigan, and forced to drive his abductor to Chicago in his own car.

It was in this automobile, in a desolate section of the South Side, that the kidnaper bound him hand and foot with oil stained rags and performed a crude emasculating operation.

Dr. Bauer told detectives, they said, that he suspected a Kirksville, Mo., man whom his wife had described as being intensely jealous of him. Descriptions of the suspect were broadcast and police of Michigan and Missouri agreed to help in the search.

Dr. Bauer was married to Miss Louise Schaffer at La Grange, Mo., the home of her parents, July 14. It was a whirlwind courtship, friends of Dr. Bauer said, and the suspect, who had known the bride several years, was reported to have been

Berlin Holds Police Ready For Disorder

Extra Precautions for Possible Trouble Ordered.

Nazi Offensive Laid to Growing Pressure of Crisis.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, July 31.—Extraordinary police precautions against possible trouble were instituted in Berlin tonight shortly after impartial foreign observers said they believed Nazi Germany's economic crisis lay behind the Reich's vigorous many-sided offensives against "state enemies."

Count von Helldorf, Berlin's new police president, instructed his men to hold themselves ready for eventualities all this week, though the capital outwardly was normal.

Earlier, usually reliable sources said they understood Storm Troops and members of the party's "political organization" also had been ordered to keep themselves in readiness.

Schacht Sees Difficulties.

That economic difficulties play an important part in Reichsfuehrer Hitler's decision was indicated by Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, minister of economics, who said in an address in connection with the unveiling of a bust of Hitler in the Reichsbank vestibule:

"We have no thought of sticking our head in the sand in the face of such tremendous difficulties—on the contrary."

The unbiased foreign observer, taking cognizance of the economic crisis, expressed the opinion that the anti-reactionary drive was designed possibly to forestall opposition within the ranks of Hitler's followers.

Malcontents over the economic situation are housekeepers, tradesmen and underpaid workmen, disturbed by food prices which average, in the case of meat, 40 per cent higher than six months ago.

Blowing Off Steam.

Malcontents over the political outlook are old party members who have failed to get jobs, Nazi underlings whose rise has not been fast enough to suit them and outright, if secret, opponents of the Nazi regime.

The government's strategy appears to such an impartial observer to have two aspects:

1. By turning the rising discontent against the Jews, "political Catholicism," the Steel Helmet veterans' organization and student fraternities, it lets restive followers blow off steam and diverts attention from other matters.

2. By recognizing and accepting the campaign of repression, it destroys in advance the organization which might be formed by the disgruntled.

Parley Chiefs Divided.

There appears to be one defect in the program—it may disturb powers now friendly to Hitler. This, the unbiased observer suggested, puts continuation of the program squarely up to Der Fuehrer.

As supreme head of the government, he must guide its foreign policy. He must decide, it appears, whether Germany, in view of her relations with other countries, can afford to continue the radical policy of the last few weeks.

Thus, too, the observer explains apparent differences within the party over the program. Some high quarters say party chieftains have ordered extremist tactics discontinued; others deny this.

Jews Warned to Stay Out.

Whatever the outcome, action against "reactionaries" on several fronts continues. Today's developments included:

1. The municipal press and propaganda office warned Jews to stay out of Berlin, saying "undesirable" future arrivals "will be sent to public asylums, where they will receive the barest necessities, and will be sent as soon as possible out of the city."

2. A veritable avalanche of decrees and official warnings

55 Drowned as Soviet U-Boat Sinks After Collision in Baltic

By the United Press.

Moscow, July 31.—The crew of 55 of the Soviet submarine B-13 died July 25 when the vessel foundered during maneuvers with the Russian Baltic fleet in the Gulf of Finland.

News of the disaster—similar to that which took 44 lives aboard the American submarine S-4 in 1927—was released by the naval commissariat tonight.

A ship crashed into the B-13 while it was submerged. The sub-sea vessel sank and all aboard, including midshipmen from Soviet naval schools, perished.

The government decreed grants of 10,000 rubles each to families of the victims. Pensions were awarded relatives. Measures for raising the sunken craft were ordered by the naval commissariat.

The submarine foundered after the collision, making rescues impossible.

State funerals will be accorded the bodies of victims as soon as salvage operations, now progressing, succeed. Services will be conducted at the Kronstadt naval base.

Victims included seven cadets from the Soviet naval academy at Leningrad who were receiving summer training. The remainder were regular personnel of the Red fleet.

Officials said the B-13 tragedy was the first major Soviet naval catastrophe in many years. Announcements did not identify the vessel which struck the submarine, sending it to the bottom even before rescue boats could be lowered.

A naval commissariat board of inquiry was appointed to conduct a rigorous investigation and to survey results of the complicated maneuver the B-13 was performing at the time of the disaster.

The B-13 was built in 1917.

Roosevelt Slips Away for Picnic

West and Two Secretaries Guests; Home at Dark.

Without advance notice, President Roosevelt late yesterday quietly slipped out of the White House and motored to nearby Montgomery County for a picnic luncheon with the newly appointed Undersecretary of the Interior, Charles West, and two of his private secretaries.

Mr. Roosevelt did not even advise some of his close associates in the secretariat that he planned the picnic venture. He had a comparatively light calling list and managed to dispose of his mail and other routine tasks several hours earlier than usual.

A few minutes before the Government departments began pouring workers into the streets, homeward bound, the President slipped out to his automobile.

Italo-Britain Clash Halts League Talk

The Italo-Ethiopian Crisis.

While Ethiopian war chiefs met with Emperor Haile Selassie and told the world that Ethiopia would not agree to a mandate—that its independence was not for sale or barter—Italian and British delegates to the League of Nations Council seeking arbitration of the dispute clashed at Geneva. Peace efforts appeared headed for disaster.

At Rome, Premier Mussolini's newspaper insisted that "total solution" was necessary. War monopoly of coal, coke, copper and other minerals was decreed.

From Addis Ababa, Edward W. Beattie, correspondent, reported Ethiopia a vast drill ground.

By the Associated Press.

Geneva, July 31.—League of Nations Council efforts to avert war in East Africa were threatened with disaster tonight.

After a session terminating abruptly with sharp clashes between British Secretary for League Affairs Anthony Eden and chief Italian delegate, Baron Pompeo Aloisi, frantic efforts to reach a compromise solution failed.

The council is confronted with deadlock.

Italy refuses flatly to permit league intervention beyond reviving arbitration strictly in accordance with its own ban against frontier boundary discussions.

Ethiopia declines to limit arbitrators' competence, holding frontier incidents cannot be considered without weighing border delimitations.

Eden insists the league is entitled to investigate the entire Italo-Ethiopian dispute in all its ramifications.

After the council adjourned tonight Eden and French Premier Pierre Laval strove for a new plan to avert war, binding the three signatories of the 1906 treaty recognizing Ethiopia's sovereignty—Italy, France and Italy—to start immediate negotiations for a peaceful settlement.

Fail to Agree.

But in a series of frantic midnight conferences Eden, Laval and Aloisi failed to agree on a draft resolution embodying a plan for a peaceful settlement.

They decided to resume private council conversations tomorrow in an atmosphere strained already by the tilt between Eden and Aloisi, which definitely lined Britain up on the side of Ethiopia.

[Meanwhile, the Associated Press reported that Eden and Laval were ready to ask the contending nations to stack their arms while the League Council sought arbitration of their differences. There was some doubt that Italy would agree, since it was hinted Mussolini was unwilling to have mentioned the matter of nonresort to arms.]

Laval indicated the first day of the council's fourth attempt to prevent east African hostilities produced only further divergencies of views. He said several days may be necessary for reaching agreement.

Reportedly, the last draft resolution on which negotiations are proceeding, provides for resumption of arbitration of the Ualual clash with appointment of a fifth conciliator—possibly the Swedish jurist, Knut Hjalmar Leonard Hammarskjoeld, sr., or the Greek jurist, Nicolas Politas. It provides for opening negotiations between signatories of the 1906 treaty and Ethiopia covering the entire dispute and pledge by Ethiopia and Italy not to resort to force.

Takes Firm Stand.

But little hope was pinned to this formula. There appeared to be no budging the Italians and Ethiopian delegates and the situation was complicated further by the opposing stands of Eden and Aloisi, who failed to yield to compromise overtures by Laval and Soviet Foreign Commissar Maxim Litvinoff, council president.

Britain lined up definitely with Ethiopia against Italy when the council agreed to revive arbitration

Roosevelt Hits Evaders As House Speeds Taxes; Utilities Fight Pressed

Surprise Move Planned as $25,000,000 'Deal' by A. G. E. Is Bared.

By the Associated Press.

A new effort to drive through the House today President Roosevelt's requested abolition for "unnecessary" utility holding companies was reported last night to be planned by Administration leaders.

It was projected after Senate lobby investigators heard an accountant's tale of how $25,000,000—half of its profit—had been "siphoned" from operating units of the Associated Gas & Electric Co.

Also, to match the Senate committee's furore over the disappearance of Howard C. Hopson, regarded as the Associated's boss, House lobby hunters reported a missing witness. He was E. V. Sellers, who last week told Senate investigators of contacts between Representative Patton (Democrat), Texas, and officials of the Texas Power & Light Co.

First Ballot by Name.

Simultaneously, Patton told the House Rules Committee, conducting the investigation there, that between February and June he had $2,600 in income from various sources in addition to $3,000 he invested in Government bonds.

The plan for another House showdown, if carried through as outlined by some Democratic chieftains, will have the Representatives vote by name for the first time on the holding company issue, which has deadlocked a conference between the Senate and House and Means Committee Defies President, Plans Amendment.

Debate on Floor Cut to 6 Hours

Levies Are Hit in Senate as 'Non-Fiscal' and 'Gamble.'

Partial text of majority tax report—Page 11.

By Robert C. Albright.

Berated in the Senate by business interests as essentially "non-fiscal" and a capricious "gamble," the $270,000,000 "tax-the-wealthy" bill was modified yesterday by Ways and Means Committee Democrats to exempt corporate gifts to charity, as the House Rules Committee spurred the measure forward by a six-hour limitation on House debate.

Belated action exempting up to 5 per cent of a corporation's net income from taxes on gifts to non-profit charitable institutions was in direct defiance of President Roosevelt's known views. The full Ways and Means Committee will act on the proposal today, and later offer it to the House as a committee amendment.

Determination of leaders to press the bill to House passage this week, if possible, was reflected by an open rule reported by the House Rules Committee, allowing only six hours' general debate, beginning today, but permitting amendments to be offered from the floor.

Earlier, Chairman Robert L. Doughton of the Ways and Means Committee, was repulsed on the floor by leaders when he asked unanimous consent for an 8-hour debate limitation. Irionically, it was Pat Boland, Democratic House whip, who objected.

"Members are played out," Boland asserted. "They have been waiting for three weeks for this bill. In my opinion, the House is ready to vote now. Mr. Speaker, I object."

President Roosevelt at his semi-weekly press conference, avoided direct comment on the House draft of his tax bill, but left no doubt in the minds of reporters on his advocacy of taxing wealth.

"Thrifty" Families Cited.

He said his own study of the tax question has disclosed that 58 of what he facetiously termed the "thriftiest" people in the United States—people whose incomes are $1,000,000 or more a year, paid no Federal tax in 1932 on 37 per cent of their net incomes. He said investments in tax-exempt securities enabled them to escape paying taxes.

One family, whose name the President declined to reveal, had 197 family trusts for the purpose of avoiding or reducing their income surtaxes, he said. He remarked that this also was a very "thrifty" family, adding that he was in favor of anything that would put a stop to tax avoidance of this type. He said he thought the only successful way would be to remove exemptions from securities by a constitutional amendment.

Roosevelt Given Setback.

Decision of Ways and Means Democrats to exempt corporate gifts to charity was but one of many direct setbacks given the President by Democratic framers of his House tax bill. His proposals for steeply graduated corporate income taxes were thrust aside in favor of a 1 per cent, two-bracket step and an excess-profits tax Mr. Roosevelt had not sought. Further, the President had asked for surtax brackets beginning at $1,000,000. Ignoring his advice, the committee dipped to incomes of $50,000.

While the House leaders were lining up members for swift passage of the bill, the Senate Finance Committee, which Tuesday heard sharp criticism of the measure from its own members, yesterday heard a procession of witnesses pick flaws in a bill they said would serve no budget-balancing objectives, but on the contrary would yield negligible revenue and needlessly retard any gains toward a business pick-up.

Among their number were Noel

Maryland Man Drowned; Heat Moves on D. C.

13 Die in Midwest as Fear of New Drought Grows; 92 Is High Here.

A member of the Gaithersburg baseball team was drowned in the Potomac River near Seneca, Md., yesterday, seeking relief from the sweltering beginnings of a new Washington heat wave.

He was Forest Briggs, 27, shortstop for the Gaithersburg Independents. A strong swimmer and an outstanding athlete while attending the Gaithersburg High School three years ago, he drowned less than 100 feet from the Virginia shore. He had frequently swam the entire width of the stream, nearly a mile, at this point.

Witnesses to his drowning were his brother, Walter Briggs, 16, and Robert Bohrer, 16, and Daniel Robertson, 21, also of Gaithersburg, who dived time and again in frantic efforts to save him.

The boys hired a rowboat on the Maryland shore and were rowing across the river to cool off, alternately diving and swimming. Forest Briggs was the last to dive. His companions rowed on, feeling certain he was in no danger.

They had rowed but a few yards when they heard Briggs scream, saw his head sink below the surface. They whirled the boat about and quickly reached the spot where Briggs had gone down. The Rockville fire rescue squad was dragging for the body last night.

In the Middle West, where a new heat wave was believed to be moving on Washington and the Eastern seaboard, swiftly mounting temperatures yesterday brought the summer's heat toll to over 100, the Associated Press reported.

In Washington, the Weather Bureau's thermometer climbed 21 degress in 12 hours, from a low of 71 at 5 a. m. to a high of 92 at 5 p. m. The forecast was for generally fair and continued warm

Utilities Plan Big Expansion Of Farm Power

Electric Program Costing Millions May Speed Recovery Plans.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Plans for what may become a substantial stimulus to economic recovery were disclosed yesterday by Morris L. Cooke, rural electrification administrator, when he revealed that the private electrical utility industry had formulated a program calling for the expenditure in the next year of $238,249,000 in rural electrification.

Under the program most of this money would have to be loaned by the Government, subject to repayment. But Cooke estimated that in addition the private utilities would undertake large privately financed expenditures for rural electrification which might run as high as 40 cents for every $1 advanced by the Government.

The program outlined by a committee representing a preponderant section of the private electric utility industry would serve with electrical power and equip with appliances 351,000 rural prospects of which 247,000 would be farms, now lacking electrical facilities. This would be an increase of 32 per cent in the number of farms served by privately owned utilities.

New Power Lines.

Construction of 78,180 miles of new power lines would be necessary to fulfill the program, which would comprise approximately 40,000 projects located in several thousand distribution centers in all parts of the country. It is estimated the program would provide 111,880,000 man-hours of work in direct labor at an average of 70 cents an hour.

Of the estimated expenditure of $238,249,000 on the program, $113,685,000 would be spent by operating companies on construction of power lines and the installation of

Mystery Sniper Hits Blimp, Search by Navy Is Started

By the Associated Press.

Lakehurst, N. J., July 31.—Mysterious attempts to destroy the Navy blimp ZMC-2 with rifle fire were reported tonight by Lieut. Comdr. Charles E. Rosendahl, in charge of the Lakehurst naval air base.

Rosendahl disclosed the blimp returned to its hangar yesterday with a bullet hole in the port horizontal fin. The ship had been cruising over the Atlantic off Point Pleasant in search of the body of a drowning victim.

Lieut. Ben May, in command of the blimp, reported to Rosendahl that he heard the impact of two more bullets against the metal shell of the craft while cruising near shore. May said a number of boats were helping in the search for the body and it was impossible to determine the origin of the shots.

Aboard the blimp with Lieut. May were two other officers and two enlisted men. Rosendahl said he had made no report of the incident to local police authorities, but that he felt action would have to be taken to apprehend the sniper.

"I can't see why anyone would shoot at the blimp, especially when it was bent on a humanitarian errand of that sort," he said.

Rosedahl disclosed the blimp has been the target of mystery snipers three times since it was built in 1928. When it came to the hangar from the manufacturers there were two bullet holes in the steering apparatus, he said. Again, three years ago, two more bullets were fired into the ship during a long flight over New Jersey. One penetrated the shell and caused a serious loss of helium gas, Rosendahl said.

The commander said only a high-power rifle range rifle could inflict such damage on the blimp, even though it was flying at low altitude.

Congress Cuts Price-Fixing Out of AAA Bill

Davis Assures Farmers of Compensation on Performed Contracts.

By the Associated Press.

Congress yesterday ripped price fixing out of the Administration's AAA amendment bill.

The action came when House conferees on the measure agreed with the Senate amendment to ban the price-fixing provision.

Downtown, meanwhile, the AAA sought to assure wheat farmers their adjustment contracts would not be voided by any possible retroactive effect of an adverse Supreme Court decision. It also announced a 15 per cent reduction in wheat acreage next year for those who signed adjustment contracts.

At the same time Federal Judge Merrill E. Otis, at Kansas City, issued a temporary injunction against collection of AAA processing taxes on grain and livestock in this district.

Judge Otis, however, declared he was not prepared to agree with previous court decisions that the AAA is unconstitutional and ordered one meat packing and twelve grain companies to deposit with the court clerk all money involved in their injunction suits, pending arguments of the cases on their merits September 10.

At Elizabeth City, N. C., Federal Judge I. M. Meekins, on the other hand, refused to restrain collection of the processing tax on wheat and flour. The plaintiff was the Janney-Marshall Co., Inc., of Fredericksburg, Va.

Injunction Denied.

Judge Meekins said his idea was that "that the Revised Statutes of the United States poined ou a complete remedy involving the collection of taxes by the Government and the collection of the tax because of the alleged threat, as the plaintiff termed it, by the Congress to cut off the taxpayers' right to adjudicate his cause in the courts was not sufficient to warrant the unusual and unprecedented remedy suggested by the plaintiff—injunction against the Government and a restraining order in favor of the taxpayer."

The Senate-House AAA bill conferees ousted the price-fixing provision at an unexpected and short meeting. They plan to take up other controverted sections tomorrow, including the import quota, export debenture and the much-debated Senate amendment to allow under certain limitations suits for recovery of processing taxes.

Chester A. Davis, AAA chief, in announcing the wheat acreage reduction, said of the contracts:

"Even if an adverse decision by the Supreme Court should materialize at some future time, the contract in its present form is admirably devised to protect both the farmers and the Government.

"The Government would have both a moral and a legal obligation to compensate farmers fully for performance up to the date of such a decision. The Government, in fairness and honesty, would pay, and legally would be bound to pay in full for their compliance up to that time, but not beyond that time."

May Delay Contracts.

While the AAA made public details of the new four-year wheat adjustment contracts for 1936-39 inclusive, it was indicated that the contracts will not be offered to farmers until after final passage of the AAA amendments.

Likewise, it was reported that the farm administration will not determine the amount of benefit payments for the rye program—launched this year—until the amendments are passed.

In the 1934 wheat contracts, farmers were required to reduce acreage 15 per cent, and this year, 15 per cent. Announcement of the reduction this year was held up for several days while officials studied prospects for black rust damage in the spring wheat area.

For 1936, the AAA said, an effort will be made to place from 50,000,000 to 53,000,000 acres of wheat land under contract, and the reduction will be made from this total.

Contract signers may not plant more than 85 per cent or less than 75 per cent of their base acreage, but plantings in subsequent years may be adjusted to a maximum of 90 per cent.

The new contracts are subject to termination at the end of any marketing year by the Secretary of Agriculture, and any grower has the option of withdrawal at the end of the first two-year period.

Chinese Marauders Attack U. S. School

By the Associated Press.

Peiping, July 31.—A band of marauders within the north China demilitarized zone attacked the American Jefferson Academy, belonging to the American Board of Missions, at Tungchow, east of Peiping, today. Chinese guards drove them off after an hour's engagement.

It was not known whether the bandits, said to number several score, were members of the band which has been holding Gareth Jones, British journalist, for the last three weeks.

Hsinking, Manchukuo, July 31 (AP).—The Rengo (Japanese) News Agency correspondent reported that a Manchukuan, released by bandits who derailed the Hsinking-Tumen express and slew 12 persons, arrived here today and said the bandits were holding 25 hostages.

The freed man was reported to have expressed fear for the safety of the captives—five Japanese and 20 Manchukuans—because of the ferocious nature of their captors.

Administration Enters a New Phase of Recovery Work; Roosevelt Now in 'Big-Time' Game.

By Raymond Clapper

FOR the first time some of Mr. Roosevelt's intimates say that President Roosevelt is through springing new ideas—for this year anyway—and that no more rabbits are hidden in the White House hat.

That is passed on for what it is worth. If it is true, it means that Mr. Roosevelt has agreed with practically all of his advisers, who have been urging him to let up and give the country a rest.

Mr. Roosevelt now has on the statute books, or on the way there, enough legislation concerning recovery and reform to occupy his Administrative organization indefinitely. He has bit off as much as, if not more, than it can chew at one time. Pressure for further hasty recovery action has been relaxed by the rapidly improving economic situation and the dangers are daily brought home by the chaotic features of the overnight tax program.

There is reason to believe that Mr. Roosevelt recognizes that his Administration has now reached a plateau where, after having pulled up the steepest part of the incline leading out of the depression depths, progress can be made more rapidly under natural momentum than under further forced pulling and tugging on the life-lines.

Heavy industries, consumer industries, construction, corporation earnings all are progressing strongly. The mortgage burden is less onerous. Low interest rates are beginning to have their effect in private financing. Large numbers of corporations have refunded their indebtedness to take advantage of lower carrying charges, thus releasing income for other purposes.

Unemployment alone has failed to respond materially. So long as that condition continues, the Administration's job is not done, but the field of imperative action has been narrowed greatly.

Otherwise the Administration's main tasks now are the perfecting of administrative functioning which has been far below par in some activities, notably the works program, and the general superintending of the recovery momentum through the Securities and Exchange Commission, the Government's credit agencies and the Federal Trade Commission.

In addition, there is the long-range task of establishing the social security program under legislation now practically completed. This is one of the most complicated undertakings in the history of the Government and involves not only the administration of the system in relation to the beneficiaries, but also the delicate task of handling the huge Government reserves which will be built up under the program.

The Administration's task now, properly conceived, appears to be akin to that of a new business management which has taken over a rundown property. First there are the early house-cleaning days when artificial methods are used for stimulation until recuperative forces begin to take effect.

Then, as natural momentum takes hold, the management turns more and more toward consolidating its policies and administration, to getting the "bugs" out of the operating activity, and to planning carefully and with great deliberation its long-range policies. It is into that stage, so to speak, that Mr. Roosevelt has now entered.

This calls for different technique and different tactics than were necessary in the early days when the management began the task of rehabilitation.

Mr. Roosevelt was peculiarly adapted to the spectacular first stage, shot-in-the-arm activity, when he was proud to call himself the quarterback. Improvising, taking chances on forward passes, trick plays and gallery grandstanding to rouse the fans were his dish. Now these tactics are no longer necessary, or desirable. The winning team is not made by flashy improvising on the field, but by hard coaching and hard training and solid ground work. It must have the wind and the stamina to carry it through the whole season. Because now Mr. Roosevelt is not playing practice games against small college scrubs. He is going into the big conference games now.

Women are showing resentment against Attorney General Cummings for bouncing Dr. Amy Stannard, a professional psychiatrist, from the Federal Parole Board to make way for the Mississippi politician, former Representative T. Webber Wilson, who had to be extricated from his Federal judgeship in the Virgin Islands because of judicial incompatibility.

What makes the women angry is the explanation of Attorney General Cummings that parole board work was not quite the proper thing for a lady to be doing. He thinks it is too sordid.

The Women's Newspaper Club, composed of Washington newspaper women, gave a luncheon in honor of Dr. Stannard. Half a dozen testimonial speeches were made by Dr. Stannard's professional associates, who had worked with her for seven years while she was doing psychiatric work at St. Elizabeth's Government Hospital.

All were faintly amused at the quaint solicitude of the chivalric Attorney General. Meaning to say to you, general, honi soit qui mal y pense.

Even the wild geese are showing the deplorable effects of the Administration's pauperizing relief policies, as noted by a traveler in Oregon:

"At Lakeview, one flock of wild geese has made itself at home around a hotel located on some hot springs just east of Lakeview. They are nesting on small islands in adjacent ponds, and they even stroll around the front steps of the hotel. They sit down in the middle of the graveled driveway and stare at you insolently until you almost run over them to get them out of the way. Even then they do not fly, but only waddle slowly to the side of the road. These are not tamed or wing-clipped, only the wild honkers dropping down from the great migration flights because they have found in some way that the hotel management will feed and protect them."

M'Adoo's Plan On Gold Suits Wins Approval

Proposal Validates Pending Actions, Permits Others for Period.

Administration efforts to bar all suits to recover on Government obligations, particularly those growing out of dollar devaluation moves, yesterday drew a sharp reversal from the Senate Banking Committee.

Instead of the flat barrier against all gold-clause suits raised in the President's gold bill, the committee adopted a compromise validating suits now in the courts, and permitting others to be filed for six months after passage of the bill.

The compromise amendment was submitted by Senator William G. McAdoo, of California, who, with Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia (both former Democratic Secretaries of the Treasury), has objected to the original draft as "repudiation."

Gore Proposal Loses.

The bill, as amended by McAdoo, was finally reported by a 11-to-7 vote, after the committee had thrust aside a proposal by Senator Thomas P. Gore (Democrat), of Oklahoma, which would have permitted suits for recovery for six months after maturity of gold-clause securities, no matter when they matured.

The compromise was proposed by McAdoo, after it became apparent that a majority of the committee was opposed to the bill as drawn by the Administration and approved by the President. The House had passed the bill without change, but due to powerful conservative opposition in the Senate, some observers had given it up for dead, at least so far as this session was concerned.

Robinson Favors It.

The bill may be taken up in the Senate today. Although efforts are expected to restore the bill on the Senate floor to its original form, Senate Majority Leader Joseph T. Robinson indicated late yesterday his accord with the change.

"I see no objection to the gold clause amendment," Robinson told reporters. "The McAdoo proposal seems a fair arrangement. I expect the bill to be disposed of this session."

The McAdoo substitute went farther than merely permitting suits for six months after enactment of the bill. While the original Administration draft, as passed by the House, would have forbidden suits for recovery on all Government obligations, the McAdoo proposal stipulated that recovery action be denied after six months, only as to coins or currency of the United States, securities specifically carrying gold clauses, or claims arising out of dollar-devaluation action.

House Move Fails.

A corresponding limitation was attempted in the House but failed. Opponents of the bill pointed out that the 11-to-7 vote did not indicate that the 7 voting "no" were opposed particularly to the McAdoo modification, but were opposed to any court barrier whatsoever.

Voting "no" on reporting the amended bill were Senators Glass, Bulkley, of Ohio; Gore, and Adams, of Colorado (Democrats), and Townsend, of Deleware; Carey, of Wyoming, and Steiwer, of Oregon (Republicans).

Also it will afford a measure of the effects of testimony before the lobby committees on a House lineup which several weeks ago rejected abolition of a standing vote majority of 70 and then refused to accept the entire Senate bill, with its abolition section, by a 111-vote margin.

Byrns Blocks Report.

The lobby inquiries have disclosed that hundreds of fake telegrams were sent members of Congress by power representatives in a more than million-dollar campaign to beat the utility bill. They also included charges by Representative Brewster (Republican), Maine, of Administration "lobbying" for the utility bill by Thomas Corcoran, RFC attorney, and Corcoran's denials.

Another charge of Administration pressure has grown from the issue which deadlocked the conference committee and prompted the plan for a House showdown today. A majority of the House conferees, led by Representative Huddleston (Democrat), Alabama, have refused to attend meetings as long as Benjamin Cohen, Administration aid, is present. The Senate conferees have demanded unanimously that he be permitted to attend.

Huddleston, joined by Representative Cooper (Republican), of Ohio, and Holmes (Republican), of Massachusetts, filed a report saying no progress was being made in conference because of Cohen's presence. But both Tuesday and yesterday Speaker Byrns sustained parliamentary points of order against its consideration.

Direct Vote Planned.

Frankly, Huddleston told the House yesterday, he sought action to forestall a move tomorrow to appoint new conferees. This was one course open to Democratic leaders, but it was reported last night that they had determined rather upon a direct ballot on the holding company issue.

While Chairman Rayburn (Democrat), of Texas, of the House managers declined to discuss his plans, other leaders said he would move today that the House conferees be instructed to accept the Senate's abolition section.

This would bring a vote and new test of Administration strength on the issue.

Other developments of the day:

Senate committee investigators reported they had found evidence increasing the total of Associated Gas & Electric expenditures for the campaign against the utilities bill to $805,000. The company originally reported an outlay of $700,000.

Hurley Turns Sarcastic.

Patrick J. Hurley, Secretary of War in the Hoover Cabinet, replied to testimony that he was paid $25,000 by Associated Gas & Electric, with a sarcastic comment that any influence he might have over the present Administration "would not be worth a nickel of any one's money." He said the money was for legal services only.

Moultrie Hitt, of Washington, counsel for Associated Gas & Electric berated the Senate Committee for asking "trick questions" when interrogating minor employes of Associated Gas & Electric. He charged that words had been put in their mouths.

Committee members landed on Hitt immediately and from a barrage of questions drew a reply that the minor employes in question had told the truth. But he still accused the committee of unfair innuendoes and insinuations.

Garrett Claypool, representative of the Ohio Fuel Gas Co. and the Southern Ohio Electric Co., went before the House committee and denied he had entertained members of Congress in connection with the utilities bill, although he had contacted a half-dozen from Ohio.

Representative Chandler (Democrat), of Tennessee, told the same group of receiving stacks of telegrams and letters which he strongly suspected of having a common and inspired source. He said a false address and similarity of handwriting in some of the letters aroused his suspicions.

Bearing upon the utilities bill and the proposal that "unnecessary" holding companies in the power field be abolished, a move arose to encourage consolidations of such companies by decreasing the present tax upon transfers of stock. It was suggested by Senator Hastings (Republican), of Delaware.

The story of millions "siphoned"—to use Chairman Black's (Democratic), Alabama, word—from the Associated Gas and Electric operating companies was drawn from Stuart C. Ross, accountant for the New York State Legislative Committee which recently conducted an investigation of public utilities within the State.

Then Senator Schwellenbach (Democrat), Washington, said the Federal Trade Commission had found a total "write-up" of $77,629,000 in the capitalization of the big company's operating units.

Ross said the money from the operating companies came through fees paid either by wholly owned subsidiaries of the holding companies or those owned privately by Hopson and his relatives. He said the cost was charged to the fixed capital accounts of the operating companies and became part of the rate basis, terming such a method "pretty slick."

A total of $16,000,000 in such fees were paid to the service companies of the Associated Gas and Electric system, he said, of which about $10,000,000 was profit between 1929 and 1933.

The companies which Hopson owns, he said, received $8,500,000, of which $2,805,000 was profit.

Davis Assures Farmers of Compensation on Performed Contracts.

By the Associated Press.

Congress yesterday ripped price fixing out of the Administration's AAA amendment bill.

The action came when House conferees on the measure agreed with the Senate amendment to ban the price-fixing provision.

Downtown, meanwhile, the AAA sought to assure wheat farmers their adjustment contracts would not be voided by any possible retroactive effect of an adverse Supreme Court decision. It also announced a 15 per cent reduction in wheat acreage next year for those who signed adjustment contracts.

At the same time Federal Judge Merrill E. Otis, at Kansas City, issued a temporary injunction against collection of AAA processing taxes on grain and livestock in this district.

Judge Otis, however, declared he was not prepared to agree with previous court decisions that the AAA is unconstitutional and ordered one meat packing and twelve grain companies to deposit with the court clerk all money involved in their injunction suits, pending arguments of the cases on their merits September 10.

At Elizabeth City, N. C., Federal Judge I. M. Meekins, on the other hand, refused to restrain collection of the processing tax on wheat and flour. The plaintiff was the Janney-Marshall Co., Inc., of Fredericksburg, Va.

Injunction Denied.

Judge Meekins said his idea was that "that the Revised Statutes of the United States poined ou a complete remedy involving the collection of taxes by the Government and the collection of the tax because of the alleged threat, as the plaintiff termed it, by the Congress to cut off the taxpayers' right to adjudicate his cause in the courts was not sufficient to warrant the unusual and unprecedented remedy suggested by the plaintiff—injunction against the Government and a restraining order in favor of the taxpayer."

The Senate-House AAA bill conferees ousted the price-fixing provision at an unexpected and short meeting. They plan to take up other controverted sections tomorrow, including the import quota, export debenture and the much-debated Senate amendment to allow under certain limitations suits for recovery of processing taxes.

Chester A. Davis, AAA chief, in announcing the wheat acreage reduction, said of the contracts:

Even if an adverse decision by the Supreme Court should materialize at some future time, the contract in its present form is admirably devised to protect both the farmers and the Government.

The Government would have both a moral and a legal obligation to compensate farmers fully for performance up to the date of such a decision. The Government, in fairness and honesty, would pay, and legally would be bound to pay in full for their compliance up to that time, but not beyond that time."

May Delay Contracts.

While the AAA made public details of the new four-year wheat adjustment contracts for 1936-39 inclusive, it was indicated that the contracts will not be offered to farmers until after final passage of the AAA amendments.

Likewise, it was reported that the farm administration will not determine the amount of benefit payments for the rye program—launched this year—until the amendments are passed.

In the 1934 wheat contracts, farmers were required to reduce acreage 15 per cent, and this year, 10 per cent. Announcement of the reduction this year was held up for several days while officials studied prospects for black rust damage in the spring wheat area.

For 1936, the AAA said, an effort will be made to place from 50,000,000 to 53,000,000 acres of wheat land under contract, and the reduction will be made from this total.

Contract signers may not plant more than 85 per cent or less than 74 per cent of their base acreage, but plantings in subsequent years may be adjusted to a maximum of 125 per cent.

The new contracts are subject to termination at the end of any marketing year by the Secretary of Agriculture, and any grower has the option of withdrawal at the end of the first two-year period.

Chinese Marauders Attack U. S. School

By the Associated Press.

Peiping, July 31.—A band of marauders within the north China demilitarized zone attacked the American Jefferson Academy, belonging to the American Board of Missions, at Tungchow, east of Peiping, today. Chinese guards drove them off after an hour's engagement.

It was not known whether the bandits, said to number several score, were members of the band which has been holding Gareth Jones, British journalist, for the last three weeks.

Hsinking, Manchukuo, July 31 (AP).—The Rengo (Japanese) News Agency correspondent reported that a Manchukuan, released by bandits who derailed the Hsinking-Tumen express and slew 12 persons, arrived here today and said the bandits were holding 25 hostages.

The freed man was reported to have expressed fear for the safety of the captives—five Japanese and 20 Manchukuans—because of the ferocious nature of their captors.

Between You and Me

By Raymond Clapper

FOR the first time some of Mr. Roosevelt's intimates say that President Roosevelt is through springing new ideas—for this year anyway—and that no more rabbits are hidden in the White House hat.

That is passed on for what it is worth. If it is true, it means that Mr. Roosevelt has agreed with practically all of his advisers, who have been urging him to let up and give the country a rest.

Mr. Roosevelt now has on the statute books, or on the way there, enough legislation concerning recovery and reform to occupy his Administrative organization indefinitely. He has bit off as much as, if not more, than it can chew at one time. Pressure for further hasty recovery action has been relaxed by the rapidly improving economic situation and the dangers are daily brought home by the chaotic features of the overnight tax program.

There is reason to believe that Mr. Roosevelt recognizes that his Administration has now reached a plateau where, after having pulled up the steepest part of the incline leading out of the depression depths, progress can be made more rapidly under natural momentum than under further forced pulling and tugging on the life-lines.

Heavy industries, consumer industries, construction, corporation earnings all are progressing strongly. The mortgage burden is less onerous. Low interest rates are beginning to have their effect in private financing. Large numbers of corporations have refunded their indebtedness to take advantage of lower carrying charges, thus releasing income for other purposes.

Unemployment alone has failed to respond materially. So long as that condition continues, the Administration's job is not done, but the field of imperative action has been narrowed greatly.

Otherwise the Administration's main tasks now are the perfecting of administrative functioning which has been far below par in some activities, notably the works program, and the general superintending of the recovery momentum through the Securities and Exchange Commission, the Government's credit agencies and the Federal Trade Commission.

While Chairman Rayburn (Democrat), of Texas, of the House managers declined to discuss his plans, other leaders said he would move today that the House conferees be instructed to accept the Senate's abolition section.

This would bring a vote and new test of Administration strength on the issue.

Other developments of the day:

Senate committee investigators reported they had found evidence increasing the total of Associated Gas & Electric expenditures for the campaign against the utilities bill to $805,000. The company originally reported an outlay of $700,000.

Hurley Turns Sarcastic.

Patrick J. Hurley, Secretary of War in the Hoover Cabinet, replied to testimony that he was paid $25,000 by Associated Gas & Electric, with a sarcastic comment that any influence he might have over the present Administration "would not be worth a nickel of any one's money." He said the money was for legal services only.

Moultrie Hitt, of Washington, counsel for Associated Gas & Electric berated the Senate Committee for asking "trick questions" when interrogating minor employes of Associated Gas & Electric. He charged that words had been put in their mouths.

Committee members landed on Hitt immediately and from a barrage of questions drew a reply that the minor employes in question had told the truth. But he still accused the committee of unfair innuendoes and insinuations.

Garrett Claypool, representative of the Ohio Fuel Gas Co. and the Southern Ohio Electric Co., went before the House committee and denied he had entertained members of Congress in connection with the utilities bill, although he had contacted a half-dozen from Ohio.

Representative Chandler (Democrat), of Tennessee, told the same group of receiving stacks of telegrams and letters which he strongly suspected of having a common and inspired source. He said a false address and similarity of handwriting in some of the letters aroused his suspicions.

Bearing upon the utilities bill and the proposal that "unnecessary" holding companies in the power field be abolished, a move arose to encourage consolidations of such companies by decreasing the present tax upon transfers of stock. It was suggested by Senator Hastings (Republican), of Delaware.

The story of millions "siphoned"—to use Chairman Black's (Democratic), Alabama, word—from the Associated Gas and Electric operating companies was drawn from Stuart C. Ross, accountant for the New York State Legislative Committee which recently conducted an investigation of public utilities within the State.

Then Senator Schwellenbach (Democrat), Washington, said the Federal Trade Commission had found a total "write-up" of $77,629,000 in the capitalization of the big company's operating units.

Ross said the money from the operating companies came through fees paid either by wholly owned subsidiaries of the holding companies or those owned privately by Hopson and his relatives. He said the cost was charged to the fixed capital accounts of the operating companies and became part of the rate basis, terming such a method "pretty slick."

A total of $16,000,000 in such fees were paid to the service companies of the Associated Gas and Electric system, he said, of which about $10,000,000 was profit between 1929 and 1933.

The companies which Hopson owns, he said, received $8,500,000, of which $2,805,000 was profit.

Missouri Stops Trading In A. G. E. Securities

By the Associated Press.

Jefferson City, Md., July 31.—Acting upon testimony in the Senate lobby investigation, Secretary of State Dwight H. Brown today ordered suspension of all permits to sell securities of the Associated Gas & Electric system in Missouri

A public hearing, within the next 20 days, will be granted if the companies desire to have the suspension order lifted.

Two subsidiaries—Missouri General Utilities Co. and the Missouri Southern Public Service Co.—operate in Missouri.

"Testimony in the Senate lobby investigation in Washington, D. C.," Brown's order said, "indicates that Harold C. Hopson, one of the controlling directors of your corporation, made profits amounting to more than $2,850,000 during depression years through control of your corporation and affiliated or subsidiary corporations.

"During part of this period . . . your corporation paid no dividends to its Missouri stockholders. In other words, your corporation did not keep the faith with its stockholders."

Japan Bans U. S. Books.

Toyko, July 31 (AP).—The home office banned sales today of three American books, "Japan in Crisis," by Harry Emerson Wildes; "The Challenge Behind the Face of Japan," by Upton Close, and "The Far Eastern Front," by Edgar Snow, as "detrimental to public peace."

Independence Is Not for Sale, Says Selassie

Addis Ababa Communique Declares Ethiopia Will Refuse Mandate.

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.

Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, July 31.—Emperor Haile Selassie's government—hoping for peace with Italy, but carefully keeping its powder dry—told the world in ringing language today Ethiopia's independence was not for sale or barter.

A defiant foreign office communique declaring this nation would refuse outright an Italian or other mandate appeared as the emperor met his supreme chieftains, the kings of the hinterlands over whom the King of Kings reigns, in secret session.

Almost unparalleled secrecy surrounded the meeting in the great courtyard of the palace. Informed quarters, however, said they believed the chieftains assembled to discuss preparations for possible hostilities.

No Proposal Received.

The foreign office communique was emphatic in declaring Ethiopia had received no proposal involving partial or total surrender of her independence. Any such suggestion would be rejected forthwith, it said, adding:

"No amount of prosperity under foreign domination would compensate for the loss of independence."

While the Emperor continued ostensibly pinning his hopes for averting war on the League of Nations, the meeting of the chieftains and continued troop movements gave ample evidence he was not neglecting preparations for armed defense.

The chieftains, unannounced, streamed into the capital from their wild mountain, desert and jungle strongholds, garbed in bright-hued robes, lion skins and wierd native adornments. Fierce bodyguards kept onlookers at safe distances.

Tent of State Set Up.

A great tent of state had been erected in the center of the royal palace, and there the King of Kings and Conquering Lion of Judah received them.

It was believed the meeting's first action was to pledge unity in defense of Ethiopia. Approval of the foreign office pronunciamento was understood to have followed.

Haile Selassie's easy accessibility of less troubled days had disappeared today. The palace was closed to all outsiders. A phalanx of the Emperor's guard was drawn tightly around the tent of state.

Meanwhile, this lofty capital rapidly was taking on the appearance of general military headquarters as corps of war correspondents, soldiers of fortune and the other colorful characters flooded Addis Ababa. Limited accommodations were overcrowded.

There was a noticeable absence of arriving munitions, however.

Hundreds of thousands of natives were said to be sharpening spears, fixing axheads on shafts and oiling rusty rifles.

By the Associated Press.

Rome, July 31.—Benito Mussolini seized control of Italy's metal and fuel imports for possible war use today, while his newspaper, Il Popolo d'Italian, renewed demands for "total solution" of Rome's quarrel with Addis Ababa.

"The only judge is Italy," Il Popolo said in an editorial believed to be from Il Duce's own pen. It declared the problem "not one of treating with Geneva, without Geneva or against Geneva."

An official spokesman, meanwhile, denied reports received at Geneva, that 15,000 Italian soldiers sent to East Africa were ill of dysentery.

against price increases descended upon the Reich.

3. Isolated action against the Steel Helmets continued, though the national organization and the important Prussian unit remained untouched.

Catholic Denials Doubted.

4. The official news agency, commenting upon Catholic denials that they were working with Communists, said "there remains, nevertheless, the fact that communistic propaganda among Catholic organizations has not been without success.

5. The Stuermer, published by the leading Nazi Jew-baiter, Julius Streicher, criticized Foreign Minister Konstantin von Neurath for "availing himself * * * of the service of two full-blooded Jews, Richard Mayer, in charge of the eastern division of the foreign office, and Siegfried Hey, his deputy."

Officials, confident that moderation henceforth would mark the party's national policies toward "state enemies," cited two major developments—assertions of friends of Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, the Reich's economic dictator, that Hitler intended to keep his minister of economics despite complaints that he was overconservative, and the recent order of Berlin's new police president, Count von Helldorf, that individual acts against Jews must cease.

Untermyer, in Rome, Urges Boycott of Nazis

By the United Press.

Rome, July 31.—An economic boycott against Nazi Germany was advocated today by Samuel Untermyer, New York attorney, who arrived to confer with Vatican officials and, possibly, Pope Pius. He will endeavor to persuade the church to join a nonsectarian anti-Nazi league.

"A boycott supported by a majority of the world's labor unions is the only means of halting the Hitler regime's attempt to destroy Christianity and substitute a godless, pagan religion, Untermyer said.

"Since Germany has lost 52 per cent of her trade with the United States and 32 per cent of her remaining world trade because of boycotts in force already, it does not require much imagination to visualize the effect of the recent Nazi persecution of Catholicism regardless of action taken by the church. Adoption of economic sanctions alone will counteract the insults and injuries suffered by the church."

Untermyer advocated that America refuse to participate in the 1936 Olympic games at Berlin.

ment of this Government's viewpoint.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 31.—Apparently determined to prevent a recurrence of the anti-Nazi riot at the sailing of the Bremen Friday night, the police department massed unusually heavy guards at the North River pier, from which the Hamburg-American liner Deutschland sails at midnight.

Police headquarters would not comment on the move, but the presence, in the detail of 175 officers, of ten detectives from the criminal alien squad gave support to reports that another serious demonstration was anticipated.

The Nazi flag was torn from the Bremen's bow mast in Friday night's riot, one man was shot and a score of other persons also injured.

Elaborate police preparations at the noon sailing of the United States liner Washington today proved unnecessary.

Four men arrested on felonious assault charges in connection with the Bremen riot were granted bail reductions by Supreme Court Justice Edgar J. Lauer. Their bail was cut from $2,500 to $1,000 each.

Justice Lauer also set bail of $1,000 for two other men who are now in Bellevue Hospital, charged with acting in concert with the first four.

The cases of all were adjourned until August 7, owing to the condition of Detective Matthew Solomon, who has not yet recovered from his injuries.

Soviet May Get U. S. Protests On Red Activity

3d Internationale Congress Claims Influence in Strikes Here.

By the United Press.

Moscow, July 31.—American protests that the Moscow seventh world congress of the Comintern (Third Internationale) violates the Roosevelt-Litvinoff 1933 agreement were forecast tonight.

United States Ambassador William C. Bullitt studied the question seriously. Protests have not yet been lodged with the Soviet foreign commissariat, but the embassy declined to exclude them as possibilities.

American interests at home were reported irate over Communists, boasts of their growing membership and influence in the United States, where they claimed responsibility for strikes and even social security legislation by the United States Congress.

Speeches such as that by Samuel Darcy, American Communist Party delegate, predicting a strike of American longshoremen on a vast scale, raised the question as to whether the Soviet government is permitting plotters against the internal order of the United States to meet here.

In his 1933 conversations with President Roosevelt, Soviet Foreign Commissar Maxim Litvinoff promised Communist propaganda against America would be prohibited.

In the agreement signed November 16, 1933, Litvinoff promised Roosevelt the Soviet government "would not permit formation or residence on its territory of any organization or group aimed at bringing about by force any change in the political or social order of the United States."

American quarters contended the stirring of American workers to class warfare by the Comintern can be considered violation of the agreement.

It was understood the embassy would not act until the Comintern congress has completed its sessions and adopted its resolutions. At that time American delegates will have received their "directives" or instructions from the Third Internationale.

Then the embassy will have official documents on which to decide whether the Comintern actually plotted overthrow of the American political or social order.

The Comintern now is hearing reports of national delegations—Turkish, Spanish, Rumanian and Italian representatives spoke today—but it is nearing that part of its agenda providing for discussion of a world-wide fight against fascism. It will be the high point of the session.

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt yesterday declined any comment on allegations that the Third International, now in Congress in Moscow, is permitting speeches and action by Communists which are in violation of the Roosevelt-Litvinoff non-propaganda agreement.

William C. Bullitt, Ambassador to Moscow, is making comprehensive daily reports to the State Department on the Comintern's sessions. State Department officials concededly are scrutinizing closely all official communications on the subject.

Coincidentally, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, yesterday said that the Federation's stand against recognition of Soviet Russia had been "clearly vindicated" by reports from Moscow that Communists intended to stir up trouble this fall among Pacific Coast maritime workers.

"Russia has violated her pledge by spreading propaganda in the United States through the Third International.

Italo-English Dispute Halts League Parley

in the Italo-Ethiopian dispute. After it agreed to draft a formula enabling continuance of arbitration Aloisi, seeking to block council intervention, clashed with Eden and Gaston Jeze, Ethiopian legal representative.

When Aloisi insisted Italy can not allow the council to go beyond arranging renewed conciliation of the Ualual incident Eden intervened twice, emphasizing the council can discuss the entire dispute if necessary.

Jeze reserved the right to raise other questions beyond arbitration resumption. Thus anew the council faced the task of drafting a compromise formula for resuming arbitration acceptable to Britain, Italy, Ethiopia and France.

Opening the debate, Aloisi announced Italy was willing to resume arbitration. Jeze announced Ethiopia's willingness. French Premier Pierre Laval intervened, pointing out both parties had agreed "to a point" and that France and Britain should help them reach a compromise for presentation to the council Thursday.

Jeze interrupted, saying that when he expressed Ethiopia's willingness to resume arbitration he did not mean to limit discussion at this point. He asked assurances that "arbitration can really achieve something" instead of "merely wasting time."

Eden insisted that if the council adopted Laval's suggestion it would not mean limiting its efforts, but merely would revive arbitration.

Aloisi said the council, under its June 25 resolution, could not intervene in the dispute before the expiration of the time limit which, he said, had been fixed for August 25.

Eden retorted, reserving the right to discuss the entire dispute if he deemed necessary. Soviet Foreign Commissar Maxim Litvinoff, council president, then closed the meeting, keeping the agenda open until divergences between Italy on one hand and Britain and Ethiopia on the other could be reconciled.

Swanson Says U. S. May Build Pacific Forts

Roosevelt, State Department Term Naval Plan 'Conjectural.'

By the Associated Press.

Into world talk of big armaments yesterday came word that the United States was contemplating a strengthened fortification system in its Pacific possessions.

Secretary Swanson said the naval high command had such plans under consideration, but both the Naval Secretary and his chief aid, Admiral William H. Standley, were quick to explain that no immediate action was intended toward strengthening existing or building new Pacific bases.

Swanson also disclosed, in connection with discussion of Great Britain's $750,000,000 fighting ship program, that while the United States proposed to hold to its seven-year treaty construction program it might be guided in battleship and cruiser building "by what other nations, signatories of the London Treaty, will do."

Swanson's views stood out sharply by comparison with White House and State Department remarks. Shortly before Swanson had expressed himself, Mr. Roosevelt had told reporters htat rumors that the United States planned to fortify islands in the Pacific upon expiration of the Washington and London naval treaties were purely conjectural.

The State Department added, through Acting Secretary William Phillips, that there had been "no change in the general Navy situation" and that this country was not discussing naval matters at present with any power. With an ear to other rumors, the Department said Joseph C. Grew, Ambasador to Japan, was returning to the United States on his normal leave.

The Washington and London pacts, fixing the relative naval strength of the United States, Great Britain and Japan, also forbade creation of new bases or strengthening of old ones—with the exception of the Hawaiian Islands and islands near the West Coast, Alaska and the Canal Zone.

Mining Resumption Due Near Richmond

Richmond, Va., July 31 (AP).—Issuance and sale of $500,000 of securities of the Great Southern Morgan Coal & Coke Corporation to finance mining operations in the Chesterfield coal basin near Richmond was authorized today by the State corporation commission.

The company will not attempt to work old mines abandoned years ago after having cost the lives of some 239 miners since 1839, it was explained, but will sink slanting shafts along veins on narrow sides of the elliptical basin. Geological studies indicate that a solid stratum of bituminous coal lies at the center of the basin probably 3,000 feet deep.

Miss Virginia Usher.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., July 31.—Funeral services were conducted from Bethany Baptist Church yesterday for Miss Virginia Usher, 18-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. N. Usher, of Woodford, who succumbed at Mary Washington Hospital Sunday following a short illness.

Miss Usher was a June graduate of Marye High School. Members of her class served as pallbearers.

In addition to her parents, Miss Usher is survived by a brother, Robert L. Usher.

High Unemployment Goes With High Taxes; Program Would Derange Consumer Market.

By Samuel Crowther

It ought to be significant that no one, in the current discussions of either unemployment or taxation, has raised the question of the direct relation between high taxes and high unemployment. But, the world over, the professional friends of the people, calling themselves liberals or progressives, dodge this question.

They advocate programs of tremendous spending for what is said to be the social welfare, but they never face the real issue. They never take a sheet of paper and add up what they propose.

The issue has been further obscured by the attempts to explain unemployment as a phenomenon of capitalism gone wild. We have had a lot of learned nonsense about the power to produce having suddenly shot ahead of the power to consume—in spite of the fact that there have been no epochal inventions since the war. And, in consequence, we have had planted on us the ancient and wholly disreputable twin doctrines that the way to have more is to produce less and that money manipulation can take the place of goods.

The plain fact is that in every period of history of which we have records, high taxation is accompanied by high unemployment, except during the early stages of inflation when rising prices negative the taxes. In post-war Europe the number of permanently unemployed has in each country risen with the weight of the tax burden and, in spite of the profuse explanations as to contributory causes, the fact stands out that, when taxes seep buying power, unemployment results.

Unemployment is the most serious problem in the world today and it does not help matters to conceal the true condition, as in Italy and Germany, by sending the women back into the home and replacing them with men and disposing of the remaining surplus in the army or, as in Russia, by making a technical definition of employment and consigning the residue to slave labor. Taxation is at the root of present-day unemployment, and simple arithmetic shows that it can not be otherwise.

Taxation represents an invasion of the right of the individual to spend what he earns. In effect, the Government says to the citizen: "I can spend your dollar better than you can, and, therefore, I am going to take it." This does not seem greatly to matter, so long as the other fellow's dollar is being taken, and there is a notion that it is highly salutary to take from those who have too much and give to those who have not enough. No one has yet defined what is too much or what is not enough. But the net effect of Government taking is not a redistribution of wealth, but the adding of a certain number of nonproducers to the public pay roll.

During the depression when the incomes of the supposedly wealthy were heavily cut, they did not buy expensive motor cars or yachts nor did they put up big houses. The objective of a section of the taxes now being discussed is to keep all incomes at depression levels. In that case the market for fine motor cars, yachts and big houses will disappear. Also will disappear the donations to charitable, research and educational institutions, along with the ability to finance new ventures. The Government will take over the funds and those who have been employed in the manufacture and the servicing of the luxuries of the rich will find themselves without jobs. It is the income of the people from whom work is withdrawn that will be redistributed and not the incomes of their wealthy employers.

The diversion of income from the earners of it to the Government is, to repeat, a diversion of the right to spend and represents a crippling of purchasing power all the way down the line. We have learned during the depression that lowered purchasing power does not greatly affect the buying of what are known as consumption goods. The volume of the absolute necessities of life consumed during the depression did not greatly change—although the prices changed and the trend was to the cheapest commodities. During 1934 the per capita consumption of meat and lard was 162 pounds—only 6 pounds below the all-time high.

Our country is not geared to having its whole population at the subsistence level and buying only what it needs from day to day. A portion of the population has been at that level, but we have not organized as a pauper Nation. With the growth of our wealth, the number of people employed in industries not producing physical goods has risen from 2.9 per cent in 1820, of the whole number of those gainfully occupied, to 47.2 per cent in 1930. Of those producing physical goods, about one-half are employed in the making of what are called durable goods—that is, goods such as houses mainly purchased from savings.

Taxation changes the direction of spending and, although it may not change the total amount spent, the result is to dislocate the whole industrial and service structure which the Nation has through the years built up. The depression vastly dislocated this structure. The tax program can not do other than make the dislocation permanent.

Our tax reformers today, because of their inability to see beyond their noses, are apostles of poverty.

Citizens Group Given Hearing On Road Needs

Completion of 4 Highways Urged in Winchester and Frederick Counties.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., July 31.—Headed by State Senator T. Russell Cather, a delegation of Winchester and Frederick County citizens today went to Lexington for a public hearing on allocation of highway funds in the Staunton construction district.

There they asked the State highway commission for the completion of not only Route 7, for which $100,000 has been allocated, but the completion of Routes, 50, 11 and 275, all important roads in Frederick County, as well.

Construction on Route 50 has halted because of difficulty in obtaining rights-of-way. The gap on Route 11 from this city to the West Virginia line is the only large gap between the line and Roanoke, Va., which has not been reconstructed into a modern highway. Route 275 is a short gap leading off Route 50 to the West Virginia line which will open up a large trade area for Winchester when completed. Route 7, on which work is about to begin, is a direct route to Berkeley Springs, W. Va., which will connect with a modern highway in that State, and provide a more direct route to Pittsburgh. This also will open a rich trade area, it is contended.

The convict camp, which heretofore was on Route 50, east of Winchester, is being transferred this week to Route 7, with only 4 miles of an 11-mile project on Route 50 completed. The work was halted, according to State road officials, because of the high prices set by a commission on land needed for the new location of the route.

Delegates Present Requests on Roads

Lexington, Va., July 31.—Delegations from Amherst, Buckingham, Campbell, Charlotte, Halifax, Pittsylvania and Prince Edward counties, the cities of Lynchburg and Danville, and the towns of Farmville, Chatham and Alta Vista appeared before the State highway commission here this afternoon in the interest of road needs in their localities, which are in the Lynchburg construction district.

They were heard in the afternoon, after a hearing this morning for the benefit of the Staunton district.

Cumberland, Appomattox and Nelson counties were not represented.

HIGH HAT THE HUMIDITY! CLEAR HEADS COOL OFF WITH CALVERT!

Captain R. Stuart Murray, M. E. C., F.R.G.S., F.R.S.G.S., F.A.E.S., takes Calvert on expedition into British Guiana and scene of Conan Doyle's 'Lost World,' to cheat heat! . . .

Amazing scientific evidence, plussed by tropical experience, proves Calvert cools!

HIGH hat the humidity! How? As Captain R. Stuart Murray, famous explorer, will in tropic British Guiana! With refrigerating CALVERT!

Tropical experience says, "CALVERT cools!" Below the Equator, for cooling off, whiskey is a 3-to-1 favorite over all other types of distilled spirits. Ecuador prefers it 7-to-1! Venezuela, 9-to-1! Colombia, 23-to-1!

And science upholds the experience of tropical countries! Proves that CALVERT does cool. Says, "causes more heat to be given off than its own combustion produces, so that . . . the temperature of the body is lowered."

So call for CALVERT! Because CALVERT is better whiskey . . . the best of the better blends . . . because, enjoyed in gentlemanly moderation, CALVERT leaves you cool tonight, collected tomorrow! Clear thinkers are CALVERT drinkers! Use good judgment . . . buy better whiskey . . . call for CALVERT!

"Whiskey? In hot weather like this? But isn't it heating?"
"Sheer superstition! Men in the tropics know whiskey is cooling. My favorite is CALVERT!"

Captain Murray tells a sweltering friend the secret of keeping cool in tropical countries. Says Captain Murray: "Whiskey heating? Sheer superstition! Throughout thirteen years in the hot, steaming tropics I've noticed that the men who know how to live well always call for whiskey—because it is by far the most cooling, restful drink. I'm taking an adequate supply of my favorite—CALVERT—with me to tide me over during my four months' isolation in the Guiana jungles this year."

Husband Killer Fights 2-Month Wait for Trial

New Hearing Set Today in Laurel Shooting; Bond Asked.

In a final fight to avoid waiting two months in jail for her trial, Mrs. Dorothy Jean Smith, 26, confessed slayer of her husband, Wade L. Smith, former Maryland State policeman, will attend habeas corpus proceedings this morning at Upper Marlboro.

She will be brought to the Prince Georges County circuit court from the Hyattsville jail, where she was lodged after Judge Joseph C. Mattingly refused to make a ruling Tuesday.

With her will come several witnesses who Monday night told a coroner's jury what they knew of the fatal shooting of the former patrolman in the Laurel (Md.) bungalow last Sunday morning.

Mrs. Smith, pretty wife of one year, will be represented by Attorneys J. Wilson Ryon and Senator Lansdale G. Sasscer, president of the Maryland Senate. Judge Mattingly will preside.

Bail Is Sought.

They will attempt to obtain the release of Mrs. Smith on bail until October, when she is scheduled to be tried at the regular term of the circuit court. The coroner's jury has recommended that a second-degree murder charge be placed against her. State's Attorney Alan Bowie has not yet issued a warrant.

It is expected the list of witnesses will include Mrs. Smith's brother-in-law, Carroll Harrison, of Laurel, to whom she fled early Sunday morning after the shooting.

Harrison will repeat to Judge Mattingly the story she told of a quarrel over a "tintype" photo taken at a firemen's carnival at Jessups, Md., Saturday night, which caused an argument which led to the shooting.

The young woman who married Smith only a few hours after she divorced Nuncy Greco, a Laurel barber, still maintains the shot was fired as her husband rushed at her, declaring he would kill her.

Shot Was Heard.

Neighbors told police yesterday they heard a quarrel between the two during the night. They said they called to Mrs. Smith and she closed the window nearest them. They also said they heard the shot, but did not investigate. Other neighbors said immediately after the tragedy that they did not hear a quarrel or the shot.

Mrs. Smith, it is expected, also will take the stand at the hearing this morning at 10 o'clock to tell her version of the shooting.

It is expected she will repeat the story told the coroner's jury, the narrative of a desperate attempt to "make up" with her husband after he allegedly insulted her 4-year-old son, Vincent, child by her first marriage.

Should Judge Mattingly grant her temporary freedom, it is said a relative is ready to give bond.

weather today, with cooling thundershowers a possibility.

In the Middle West, where at least 13 have died from the heat in the last 24 hours, temperatures in many States soared past 100. Searing dry winds blew across the sun-baked plains of Kansas, giving rise to new drought fears.

In 11 Central States, the current heat wave has killed 50. A sizzler two weeks ago caused upward of 60 deaths. The Associated Press compiled available heat death figures by States as follows:

Wisonsin, 6; Minnesota, 13; South Dakota, 6; Nebraska, 19; Oklahoma, 18; Illinois, 8 (7 of them in Chiago); Kansas, 9; Missouri, 8; Texas, 10; Iowa, 4, and Arkansas, 3.

The thermometer at Topeka, Kans., hit a new record high of 106. Lincoln, Neb., had 105. PiPerre, S. Dak., where the past four weeks have been the hottest of record, sweltered under a maximum of 101.

In Minnesota it was generally cooler and Chicago found relief in heavy rains.

In addition to Walter, Briggs leaves his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Briggs; a younger brother, William, and two sisters, Mrs. Nellie Croshon and Mrs. Katherine Cobert, all of Gaithersburg.

Slayer of Girl Is Convicted; Facing Death

Thompson Found Guilty by Peoria Jury After 5-Hour Deliberation.

By the Associated Press.

Peoria, Ill., July 31.—Gerald Thompson, 26, was convicted tonight of the ravishment murder of Mildred Hallmark, 19, by a circuit court jury, which fixed his punishment at death in the electric chair.

It took the jury from 4:45 p. m., Central standard time, until 8:36 p. m., to reach an agreement on the penalty, althouh a verdict was reached earlier on the young toolmaker's guilt.

Announcement of the verdict was delayed nearly an hour awaiting the arrival of Judge Joseph E. Daily and other officials.

The State had asked the death penalty for the murder of the convent graduate nurse whose almost nude body was found June 17 in the Springdale cemetery

Failure of Ren Thurman, defense counsel, to appear led Judge Daily to convene court, hear the verdict, poll the jury and then enter a motion for a new trial himself. He set August 12 for a hearing on the motion.

Defense Attorney Ben Thurman sought to save the youthful toolmaker from the electric chair on the plea that he was morally insane, a sexual maniac who could not control his desires and actions.

The trial lasted nine days during which the defendant testified that he committed the attack on the pretty hostess, but denied any intent to kill her.

Making his closing argument to the jury in Judge Joseph Daily's court, Thurman said:

"The defendant is insane in that he is cruel and uncontrollable in his lusts.

"If you kill this young man with your verdict, you will kill a man innocent of legal murder.

"You have heard the confession. I am not going to fight it. I am here to prevent you from doing something cruel and illegal."

The confession he referred to was Thompson's admission to the authorities that he choked, beat and then criminally attacked pretty Miss Hallmark in his automobile, parked in a cemetery, early on the morning of June 17.

"A party," said the attorney, "may know the difference between right and wrong, but if he has not the will power to resist his inclinations he is insane. The judge will instruct you along this line."

He had expected the State to produce an alienist, he said, but did not because "not a single one could testify this defendant was sane. I had prepared to prove this by my questioning."

"Insanity is in the blood," he said. "It will come out—sometimes in succeeding generations."

He could not put Thompson's mother on the stand because of her illness.

"If she could have testified she would have told you about this defendant's background," he said.

"A man does not have to be insane in all of his faculties to be regarded as insane.

"This defendant is a mechanical genius. Yet he is insane in some faculties."

Dwarf, Scorned, Shoots Iowa Beauty Winner

Fires From Ambush After Girl Repulses His Attentions.

Osage, Iowa, July 31.—Sheriff Charles Kathan said a 45-inch dwarf today admitted he shot a 23-year-old Osage beauty contest winner who spurned his love.

The dwarf, Marshall Bascombe, 27, was held in jail. He gave himself up to Sheriff Kathan an hour after Marie Meggett was seriously wounded by a shot fired from ambush outside her home last night.

"The shooting apparently was inspired by the girl's refusal to accept the dwarf's attentions," the sheriff said.

Bascombe gave himself up, saying: "I'm the man you are looking for."

"He readily admits he shot the girl," the sheriff said.

Miss Meggett, an attractive brunette waitress, who won second place in a beauty contest here, lives with Mr. and Mrs. Wendell Tubbs.

Mrs. Tubbs said Bascombe, whom she called "Shorty," started paying attention to Marie about three weeks ago.

"He started following her home at nights and asking for dates," Mrs. Tubbs said. "She refused him and said she was a little afraid of him. Then he tried to give her a watch.

"Marie told him she never wanted to see him again.

"Last night Marie and I came home from work. We sat around in the living room for a while trying to get cool. Then we decided to go to bed. Shorty must have been hiding on the porch.

"As Marie walked over to turn off the lights a shot flared outside the screen door. Marie stumbled back and then slumped down to the floor."

A charge of assault with intent to commit murder was filed against the dwarf, son of Fred Bascombe, cemetery sexton here.

Oil in Pacific Hints Plunge By Army Plane

Spots Strengthen Theory Missing Craft Fell Into Sea in Test.

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, July 31.—Two circles of fresh oil three quarters of a mile off shore provided an ominous clew tonight in the mysterious disappearance of a speedy new Army pursuit plane.

The oil spots, south of the Point Vincent Lighthouse, heightened fears of Lieut. William Van Dusen, leader of the extensive aerial search, that the low-winged craft had plunged into the ocean.

The plane, piloted by Lieut. Arthur H. Skaer, jr., disappeared yesterday during a test flight.

Coast Guard boats were dispatched to the site, with orders to make an intensive survey of the ocean for wreckage.

The plane, built by the Northrup Corporation, had a top speed of 325 miles an hour, making it possibly the fastest military aircraft in the world. Considerable secrecy shrouded its development and testing.

The oil spots were all that could be found by more than a dozen searching Army planes.

One spot was described as 30 feet in diameter, the other as about 15 feet.

Special Design.

The plane that Lieut. Skaer took aloft early yesterday afternoon on a scheduled test flight of only a few hours represented a startling advance in military aircraft. It was designed to fly at its top speed only 200 feet off the ground, enabling it to pour a withering machine gun fire below.

The plane had a capacity of three men, two of whom would be gunners to man the nine machine guns. The landing speed was 100 miles an hour.

Lieut. Van Dusen said that because of the heavy fog yesterday he believed it was likely the plane had plummetted into the ocean unseen, sinking immediately and leaving only the oil spots to mark the place.

Lieut. Skaer, whose home is in Walnut Park, was last seen about 4 p. m. yesterday as his plane sped over the Palos Verdes hills in the general direction of Santa Catalina Island, 25 miles offshore. The plane had gasoline for only a few hours' flight. The lieutenant was married last May.

Dayton, Ohio, July 31 (AP).—Army officials, who are in session here to inspect new designs in airplanes, refused information today on whether the Northrup Corporation has entered an airplane for their inspection.

Officials of the board for airplane design competition said no official announcement of what companies have entered planes or details of their construction will be made until purchase is authorized.

Bill to Promote Army Men Signed

5,000 Officers to Receive New Ranks Soon.

The Army promotion bill providing increases in rank for about 5,000 officers was signed yesterday by President Roosevelt, making it possible for them to receive their new ranks within the next few days.

If White House approval had been given after midnight last night the promotions would not have become effective until September 1.

A new gold pen belonging to Senator Sheppard, of Texas, chairman of the Senate Committee on Military Affairs, was used by the President in approving the measure which is designed to relieve the stagnation existing in the Army promotion list since the World War.

Suitor Sought In Mutilation Of Bridegroom

Mrs. Bauer, accompanied by Police Chief John Bowler, of Kirksville, where she is night superintendent of nurses at a hospital, arrived here by train tonight to aid in the investigation. She was rushed to the detective bureau, where officers interviewed her. She declined to answer questions of newspapermen at the station.

After word of the crime reached Kirksville, police there threw a guard around Mrs. Bauer at the Kirksville College of Osteopathy Nurses Home. They also investigated activities of a rejected suitor, who was reported to have visited her a week ago and threatened to kill himself.

At Cleveland, Ohio, former home of Dr. Bauer, the victim's mother, Mrs. Katherine Bauer, was prostrated. She said she had not been informed of her son's marriage.

A new element of mystery was injected in the case when Dr. Earl Laughlin, of the staff of Kirksville College of Osteopathy, told police Dr. Bauer feared he was insane.

Laughlin said he received a letter from Dr. Bauer today in which Bauer expressed the belief that he was temporarily insane from worry and lack of sleep. Missouri State police troopers said Bauer had wired local merchants ordering them to stop his wife's credit at Kirksville.

The victim, described as a man of studious habits, had a master of arts degree from Western Reserve University at Cleveland. He was a teacher of chemistry at Collinwood High School while a resident of Cleveland.

As he realized he was dying from loss of blood, a staff physician said, Bauer cried bitterly:

"Before God, I've never harmed a woman or a girl in my life. Why should any one have done this to me?"

Dr. Bauer, moaning in pain, was found by two gasoline-station attendants in a car which rolled into a station. A moment before, they said, they saw a man jump from the car and disappear into the darkness. The attendants took Dr. Bauer to the hospital.

Several witnesses confirmed parts of Dr. Bauer's story.

Stanley Fish, a dairy company cashier, said he and his wife were sitting on the rear porch of their apartment when they heard an angry voice raised from the direction of the vacant lot, where the operation was believed to have been performed.

"Lie down there," Fish said someone shouted. "If you make one move I'll kill you."

Fish said he heard agonized screams a few seconds later, but did not investigate.

Tax Shirkers At Bowie Get Month to Pay

Delinquents Warned of Interest After September 1 Deadline.

A warning to the delinquent taxpayers of Bowie, Md., that they must pay up by September 1 or be responsible for 1 per cent permonth interest, has been issued by Town Clerk John Zug.

Those who fail to make the payments will be "carried on the books" until January 1, at which time the properties of all delinquents will be subject to tax sales, Zug says.

In taking strict measures to collect the outstanding indebtedness of about $415, the town officials are waiving a policy of leniency which has existed since 1932. There have been no tax sales since then.

In 1923 there were nine delinquent taxpayers in the town; in 1933 there were 27, and there were 43 in 1934. During these years only one statement was sent each resident. Those who failed to pay were not warned until the next year.

Repair work on the streets of Bowie is expected to be completed the last of this week or the first of next week, it has been announced. The work is being done at a cost of approximately $500.

The annual picnic of the Ascension Catholic Church of Bowie will be held on the grounds of Whitemarsh Church, near Collington, Md., Saturday, August 31, it was announced yesterday.

The Trinity Lutheran Church of Bowie will hold services next Sunday morning at 8:30 o'clock in English. The following Sunday services will be held in German.

Margin on Aid For Maryland Set at $30,000

Contingent Fund for Next Year Cut to Fifth of 1935 Figure.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, July 31.—The contingent fund for Maryland's emergency government expenditures in the fiscal year beginning October 1 will be only $30,000, as compared to $150,000 in the last fiscal year, it was estimated today by W. H. Blakeman, State budget officer.

The estimate was made after Blakeman had finished paring down bequests totaling $1,353,577 which department heads had filed in asking for portions of the $500,000 "cushion fund" provided by the last Legislature. The budget officer said he was hopeful that the requests could be cut to $470,000, leaving the balance for the contingent fund.

Money from the "cushion fund" actually will be allotted by the Board of Public Works at a meeting next week. The requests were filed with Blakeman, who will recommend to the board which requests should be granted and amounts of the grants.

In making his recommendations, Blakeman said he had tried to give first consideration to hospitals and schools and other departments concerned with welfare. His object was to take first care of the "indigent afflicted and the ranks of school teachers and other loyal State employes," he said. He had hoped to be able to leave a contingent fund of $50,000, but needs of the departments prevented this.

Blakeman pointed out that last year's fund of $150,000 for emergency expenses was exhausted by May, four months before end of the fiscal year. Since then there have been requests for an additional $25,000 which could not be met.

Campaigning Is Quiet In Staunton Primary

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Staunton, Va., July 31.—With the Democratic primary less than a week off, not a single speech has been made by any of the several Augusta County candidates, and not one of the candidates for party indorsement has outlined his views for the electorate's benefit.

Saunton has only to make its selection for the House of Delegates, naming two of three candidates. These are C. G. Quesenbery, of Waynesboro, incumbent, and John D. Neff and Herbert McK. Smith. The county also assists in naming two House nominees, while it has its own contest between John D. White, incumbent, of near Staunton, and Felix Edmunds, of Waynesboro, for Commonwealth's attorney. W. Stuart Moffett has been declared the party's choice for the Senate seat being vacated by William H. East.

Gas Operators Active.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Glenville, W. Va., July 31.—Oil and gas operations in Gilmer and Calhoun counties are reported more active than in several years, an impetus to which was given when a 1,500,000-foot well was brought in within the week at a depth of 2,578 feet on the C. C. Pickens farm in Delkalb district, Gilmer County. Half a dozen companies and more than a dozen individuals are drilling in the territory, much of which has never been tested.

Auto Crashes Into Pole.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Seaford, Del., July 31.—Charles E. Halloway, of Salisbury, Md., funeral director, was injured today when his car struck a telephone pole on Seaford-Bridgeville State highway. Halloway was trailing a truck and said he was forced off the road when the truck turned into a service station. Halloway received a broken collarbone, cuts and bruises. The car was wrecked.

Chapter XVIII.—The Scotland Yard Fallacy.

If Scotland Yard came to America in full control of law enforcement, this entire country would run so wild with lawbreaking that the poor gentlemen from London probably would jump in the ocean through sheer frustration. Scotland Yard, as we believe we know it, doesn't exist.

With all deference to a fine old police institution, Scotland Yard would no more know how to capture a John Dillinger than it could recite the Koran. This statement necessitate presenting a true picture of the arm of English law enforcement.

Scotland Yard is the municipal police force of the City of London and nothing more. Of its 19,769 officers, approximately 1,000 are detectives, operating wholly within the city limits of London. The various fiction stories which depict the investigators of Scotland Yard as flying here, there and the other place about the British Isles in the pursuit of criminals are merely so much bish.

A member of Scotland Yard can not leave London to investigate a case in some other part of England unless the assistance of the Yard has been specifically requested by the local chief constable. The crimes with which Scotland Yard must cope are far less serious than those of any large American city. Most of the infractions investigated are those against property. Fully a third of these represent petty theft.

Other forms of larceny, such as embezzlement, obtaining goods by false pretenses and like offenses, account for another third, and the bulk of the remaining are housebreaking and shop-breaking offense. Fully 99 per cent of these are committed by unarmed persons who are arrested by unarmed policemen and detectives, who in most instances need only command the subject to surrender, whereupon there is abject obedience.

College Men Now Recruited.

For the first time, Scotland Yard is using men with a university degree. The new class of 60 is composed of sergeants and constables who are already on the force, plus 20 recruits between 20 and 26, who are college graduates. With the exception of this score of recruits, Scotland Yard's personnel need only know how to read, and write with reasonable proficiency from dictation, be generally intelligent, posess a strong constitution and have some knowledge of arithmetic. The majority of special agents in the Bureau of Investigation have a college background.

There is only now getting under way in London a crime laboratory, such as is in use at the Bureau of Investigation. Until last year the English police system has had no laboratories and has called in scientists only when other means of detection have failed.

The fingerprint file is small as compared to that of the identification unit. There is no single fingerprint file, such as that of the Ten Thousand. A great amount of jealousy exists between Scotland Yard and the 186 other municipal police forces throughout England and Wales. The Bureau of Investigation works almost constantly with the various police forces of America and is eager to co-operate even more extensively.

It all sums up into the fact that what America needs is not a Scotland Yard but a power like that which rests behind Scotland Yard, a freedom from political pressure, courts which dispense justice instead of pandering to the tricks and gags of charlatan attorneys, plus prisons which keep the criminal there after they get him.

American inefficiency in this respect is almost unbelievable. The tangled technicalities and repeated instances of clemency in the case of William Donald Mayer form an excellent example of clemency of the carefree manner in which some dangerous criminals romp, year after year, through the loopholes of our judicial and penal systems.

Schooled Son in Crime.

Shoebox Annie French, who carried her bootleg product in that kind of a package, teethed her ratlike son, Donald Mayer, in crime by writing fictitious checks and allowing him to take the blame. Evidently he was a good student; he soon graduated to burglary, for which he was sent in 1912, as C. D. Montaine, to the Whittier Reform School in California. In 1917, under the alias of C. C Skidmore, he was convicted of stealing an automobile in Bozeman, Mont., and sentenced to serve from four and a half to nine years in the Montana State Prison.

Mother's tears are effective weapons before a parole board. In August of 1920, three years after his sentence, William Donald Mayer was free again and returned to his dear mother, now living on East Commercial avenue in Anaconda, Mont.

Shortly after his arrival in the Montana city, Mayer met a man named Ole Larson. Together they sold some oil stocks and were otherwise associated. One day Mayer learned that Larson had a draft for $750. The cadaverous Mayer invited his friend out to his mother's house to have a nice, home-cooked meal. He never was seen again. A few days later, Shoebox Annie French forged the name of Larson to the $750 draft and cashed it.

Mayer and his mother continued to live in the house on East Commercial avenue. After a time, the lanky son heard that his Texas paramour, who had married, possessed some money. He went to see her. Mayer induced her to come to his home and visit Shoebox Annie. Again the door of the house on East Commercial avenue opened and closed. Again a human being disappeared.

During the investigations which followed, the police of Anaconda and Butte worked on the theory that both Larson and the Seattle woman had been slain, their bodies chopped up and the flesh destroyed by acid, while the bones had been burned or buried. They could not prove it.

Drive Stolen Auto

During all this time, Shoebox Annie and her son were driving an automobile which they had stolen in Salt Lake City during a trip which they had taken following the disappearance of Ole Larson. Finally they sold the car to a citizen of Anaconda for $365 and disappeared. The purchaser later took the car to a garage for repairs, where it was noted that the engine numbers had been altered indicating that the car had been involved in a theft. A long investigation followed, into which special agents of the Bureau of Investigation were called. Through restoration of the original motor numbers, plus further identification, they proved the car to belong to Mrs. E. V. Fritz, of Salt Lake City.

This theft and interstate transportation violated the national motor vehicle theft act. Special agents started on the trail of Mayer. At last they learned he was living in Pocatello, Idaho.

It was night when they arrived. The cadaverous Mayer was leaving the house. In one hand he carried a rifle and in the other a black bag containing stolen automobile plates, keys for every make of car, wire cutters for snipping ignition connections and other accessories of theft. He was arrested and taken to police headquarters, but as he stepped from the wagon at the station, he suddenly whirled and began to run. Police guns blazed in an effort to halt him, but the prisoner swung around a corner and disappeared in the darkness.

Again they hurried to the Mayer home. Upon opening the garage door, their flashlights revealed Mayer himself, crumpled on the floor and bleeding profusely; police bullets had taken effect in a shoulder and forearm. The wounded man had come back to the garage, removed the Utah license plates from a stolen car and had attempted to alter the engine numbers before his strength had failed. A search of the house showed much whisky, so Annie was placed in the local jail for bootlegging.

Now Mayer was in the hospital with a detective by his bedside, Tom Roan of the Pocatello force. He decided to attempt a ruse.

Roan Charges Bribe Attempt.

"Listen, Mayer," he asked confidentially, "do you know they've found the bones of that woman you murdered?"

The wounded man turned white. According to Roan, he begged for aid in an escape and offered a bribe.

The same sort of story was told to Shoebox Annie in the local jail. She received it calmly and with denials. But that night, according to the matron, she awakened, screaming:

"Oh, Donald, Donald, they've found it—they've found it!"

None of that, however, was to go into evidence. Mayer himself did much to obviate a trial for murder. He offered a trade; he would go back to Utah voluntarily and plead guilty to a charge of stealing the car which had been found in his garage, Mayer's maximum sentence of a decade in the Utah State Penitentiary lasted exactly three years. Then he was paroled.

At this time, 1923, the bones of an unidentified woman were found in Montana and the police made an effort to identify them as the skeleton of the missing Texas paramour. Mayer did not wait to hear that the police failed in this attempt. He was alleged to have stolen an engine belonging to his father-in-law, inveigled a 14-year-old boy into forging a note, sold the engine and discounted the note. Then he left the State. The police of Steamboat Springs, Colo., arrested him on this charge, only to find that a local complaint was also lodged against Mr. Mayer. It seems that he had stolen a quantity of furniture in Colorado.

So again Mayer was tried and again he was sentenced to prison, the Colorado State Penitentiary at Canon City. Again he was paroled, this time to the Idaho authorities, who intended to take him back to answer the charges in Oxford. However, for the night, he was lodged in the local jail.

Jurors Acquit Mayer.

It was Halloween, so William Donald Mayer felt prankish. He pooled his exuberant spirits with those of several inmates and all engaged in the diversion of sawing the bars of their cells. Once free from their cells, the escaping men lived true to the Halloween tradition by wrapping themselves in sheets and prancing out of prison. In January of the following year, Mayer was arrested in Kansas and returned to Pocatello to face charges preferred by his father-in-law. The jury lived up to the finest traditions of such bodies. It acquitted him.

Not long after this, the Bureau of Investigation again entered the life of Mayer. Special agents brought a white slave charge against him. For this he drew three years in Leavenworth. Out of prison, the dutiful son went back to his mother, who was living in Seattle.

In the fall of 1928, James Eugene Bassett, a young Maryland naval officer, arrived in Seattle in a roadster. He recently had been appointed secretary to an American admiral in Manila and naturally desired to sell his car before sailing for the Philippines. A potential purchaser appeared quickly. He was William Donald Mayer, this time under the name of De Casto Earl Mayer. He offered $1,600 for the car, provided the officer would drive it to the home of Mayer's "aunt," a short distance out of Seattle, so that she might inspect it.

The ship sailed for the Philippines with one cabin empty. James Eugene Bassett had disappeared. His body was never found. A week later, a policeman in Oakland, Calif., saw a roadster approaching and flagged it to a stop. The occupants were William Donald Mayer and his mother; they were taken to headquarters, where they denied any knowledge of the missing naval officer. However, they not only had Bassett's car, but they had his wrist watch, his cuff links and a pocketbook. Also in the car were a rifle equipped with a silencer, shells with part of the charge removed, so that less noise would result from their explosion, a gas gun, chloroform and a pair of tongs suitable for breaking bones. Again, however, a murder charge failed. There was no corpus delicti. Mother and son were removed to Seattle, where they were tried for the theft of Bassett's property.

Receives Life Term.

Only one thing prevented Mayer from serving a short sentence and again being free to murder and steal. The State of Washington has a habitual criminal law providing for life imprisonment after conviction of three felonies. Mayer, therefore, was sentenced to life in Walla Walla Penitentiary, while his mother was tucked briefly away for an indeterminate sentence of from five to ten years.

The files of the Bureau of Investigation show that William Donald Mayer, from the time of his first offense under the tutelage of his mother to the time he was put away as a habitual criminal, had been incarcerated in eight different penal institutions in California, Washington, Montana, Utah, Colorado, Kansas, Idaho and Oregon. In addition to the three missing persons mentioned, an equal number of others disappeared after they had been seen in his company.

The sentence to life imprisonment was not for the major crimes he was supposed to have committed. It was for three thefts of automobiles, a poor makeshift indeed.

A thousand Scotland Yards could have functioned no more efficiently than the police of various cities and the Bureau of Investigation in various chases of William Donald Mayer.

New York, July 31 (AP).—Walter E. Edge, former Ambassador to France, said today the political situation "looks more and more encouraging for the Republican Party."

Edge sailed on the Normandie for a six-week vacation in Europe. He was taking a rest, he said, "to acquire energy to help straighten out the madhouse in Washington."

"When I return," he added, "I will stay in Washington for the winter, and get on the firing line. I am looking forward to the scrap."

A NEW GASOLINE THAT NAMED ITSELF!

WHEN we inquired of our chemists what was new and different about our new American Gas, one of them said, "Among other things, it's not acid-treated, it's not necessary to add outside chemicals, and it's "air-conditioned".

"What do you mean, "air-conditioned"? he was asked. "You know," he answered, "how a motor acts up with ordinary gasoline when you run into sudden changes of temperature and humidity. In the course of a day there are a lot of such variations.

"Well, this new gas, as you know, is produced from a 100% pure petroleum base. By careful adjustment of light end content we're able to condition this gasoline at the new refinery so that it counteracts erratic tendencies in the motor due to outside temperature and humidity changes.

"There's been a lot of talk," he continued "about 'uniform performance' of gasoline. But it's built right into this gasoline—you fill up at any of our pumps from Maine to Florida and, whether you drive long distances or short distances, your motor will never notice any change in weather or climate. This gasoline is "air-conditioned" and different."

And from that moment on it was known as "AIR-CONDITIONED" American Gas. It was named for how it's produced—for what it is and what it does!

"AIR-CONDITION" YOUR MOTOR!

Stop at any Yellow and Black American Gas pump and fill up your tank with "AIR-CONDITIONED" American Gas. Then keep your car "air-conditioned" with this amazing new "AIR-CONDITIONED" American Gas. Even though it costs us more to produce, it is being sold at regular gas price from Maine to Florida and inland, by thousands of American dealers and stations.

READ THESE OTHER GUARANTEED FEATURES

CLEAN BURNING: 100% Pure Petroleum Base—No Added Chemicals—100% clean burning—no harmful deposits.

Death And Horsepower.

We commend to the particular attention of the automobile industry the communication from Maj. Wilbur Rogers which appears in our letter column today. It will be recalled with sorrow that in April a car driven by Mrs. Rogers escaped her control to strike down and kill the wife of the District librarian and that later, driven to a state of extreme mental depression by the tragedy, Mrs. Rogers took her own life.

Since this double tragedy it has been ascertained that Mrs. Rogers had been driving automobiles for more than 20 years without accident or even violation of the most minor traffic ordinance. On that fatal April morning, she had put her car into low gear and had started forward slowly when another vehicle crossed her path, forcing her to swerve suddenly to the right. She attempted to halt the car and had done so when it automatically shot forward again up over the curb and, in spite of her every effort to regain control, continued on to strike Mrs. Bowerman.

Here, then, was a case of an experienced and unusually careful driver unable to control a piece of machinery because it had become uncontrollable. The 90-horsepower engine behind which she sat had run completely amuck, breaking down the mechanical safeguards. These circumstances led Maj. Rogers to inquire whether there are not many similar stories behind the ubiquitous accounts of automobile accidents; whether there is not a positive connection between horsepower and traffic fatalities; whether, in sum, the Nation's enthusiasm for speed has not run away with itself, a Frankenstein creating a monster which wreaks an annual havoc of 36,000 lives and 1,250,000 injuries.

It is a searching question and one which demands the most careful inquiry. Despite strict traffic regulation, improved highway facilities and better mechanical equipment, the automobile accident rate increases as the power factor is stepped up. The highways today are crowded with machines capable of making the absolutely unnecessary and generally illegal speeds of 75 and 80 miles per hour. The hospitals and cemeteries are filled with their innocent victims. To what end and for what desirable purpose?

Unreasonable Obstruction.

In both houses of Congress enactment of the national munitions bill is being retarded by single individuals. No substantial opposition to the measure has developed. Yet its passage at this session is jeopardized by casual sniping for which no convincing reason has been advanced.

Commending this measure to his colleagues, Senator George declared that it "undertakes to accomplish but one thing; that is, to create a munitions board for the control of shipments of munitions into and out of the country, and to set up a registration and licensing system for both exports and imports of munitions." It would not place an embargo on arms shipments abroad, but it would establish the administrative machinery through which embargoes could be made effective when and if circumstances warrant their imposition. In both its purpose and method the bill is an example of simplicity. Yet Senator King objected to its consideration.

This attitude on the part of the Utah Senator is particularly distressing in view of the fact that he alone blocked the international arms traffic convention for a whole year. Is the senator opposed to any governmental control over the trade in implements of war? If not, he places himself in an impossible position by frustrating the efforts of the State Department to set up an effective control agency. When one lone legislator stands in the way of a measure so obviously designed to serve the public interest, a public explanation is in order.

On the House side Representative Tinkham is attempting to obstruct the bill through an irrelevant amendment. He wants to prevent the export of arms to any country engaged in a war to which the United States is not a party. In taking that stand for American neutrality he will have the sympathy of a great majority of the American people. But his attempt to inject that extremely complicated issue into the relatively simple munitions control bill is utterly inconsistent. For if Mr. Tinkham should succeed in defeating this measure, it would be impossible to maintain any effective embargo on arms shipments.

Mr. Tinkham's chatter about Great Britain controlling American foreign policy may be dismissed as political nonsense of a rather over-emphasized variety. If the bearded solon is really interested in preserving the neutrality of this country, he can not thus sidestep the logic of preparing to control American war supplies shipped abroad. When that preliminary step is taken, the more complicated issue of avoiding frictions conducive to hostilities may well be considered.

A Stupid Protest.

It is scarcely accidental that the Department of State has issued its first official condemnation of religious persecutions in Germany coincident with the receipt of the German government's protest against the recent assault on the swastika emblem in New York Harbor. And the intimation from Washington is not so delicate that it will fail to penetrate even the thick skulls of the Nazi leaders. If the policy of the German government violates "the most fundamental principles of our own civilization and political faith," to quote the State Department note to representatives of Jewish groups, it can hardly expect the Nazi banner, or Nazi emissaries, to be welcomed on these shores.

The text of the German protest over the flag incident has not been made public, probably to avoid further stimulus to Nation-wide resentment against current practices in that country. It is known that punishment for the rioters and not an official apology from Washington was demanded, which shows some Teutonic discrimination. The punishment for a gross and irresponsible violation of international etiquette should of course be given, in spite of the German note rather than because of it. But the Department of State should at the same time let it be known even more clearly that official German protests on this score are subject to sharp discount.

Until recently the United States has been very patient with the appalling mixture of brutality, stupidity and arrogance which characterizes the Nazi regime. If the Germans can tolerate such bungling and degenerate leadership it is not our business to interfere, so long as its effects are confined to Germany. But when Nazi policy becomes an active irritant in German-American relations it is time to let Berlin understand, politely but firmly, just where the original blame lies. For the regrettable attack on the Nazi flag was only a link in a chain of circumstances, and can not properly be regarded as an isolated episode.

In recent months there have been several attacks on Americans in Germany, incidents which may have received diplomatically correct adjustments but which for that are not expunged from the record. There have been numerous instances of discrimination against American investors in German securities, sufficiently flagrant to cause governmental complaint. Most serious of all these has been ample evidence of German sympathy for, if not connivance in, attempts to propagate Nazi principles and organization among morons in this country.

When Germany protests the riot aboard the Bremen, which she has a perfect right to do, her government inevitably directs attention to the chain of factors behind that riot. An action which is correct in form thereby becomes a boomerang. For it virtually makes it incumbent on our Government to direct German attention to the root of the evil. And that is the assault upon fundamental principles of civilization which the Nazi regime not merely tolerates, but actively promotes.

More than any other great nation, Germany is dependent on foreign good will for her very existence. Her present practices are rapidly forfeiting all of this essential good will. And for the Nazis to make formal protest over the almost inevitable consequences of their own short-sighted policy is a further example of the streak of almost incredible ineptitude which is rapidly plunging a great people into utter ruin.

Lobbying Revelations.

The Senate lobby committee has unquestionably performed a vital public service in revealing the methods employed by the Associated Gas and Electric Co. to block passage of the Administration's holding company bill. It has done well, too, in calling attention to the unsuitability of leaving chief responsibility for conduct of the House inquiry in the hands of a Congressman whose brother has been employed as counsel by the offending company.

Nevertheless, the indefensible tactics of a single holding company, and the fact that critics can now effectively challenge the impartiality of Representative O'Connor, do not constitute valid arguments in favor of dissolution of holding companies having honest and efficient managements. Neither are they grounds for condoning the high-pressure lobbying methods adopted by the Administration to induce Congress to approve the "death sentence" clause in the holding company bill.

The lobby inquiry has further emphasized the long-acknowledged need for effective Federal regulation of holding companies. It has clearly demonstrated that not all such companies can be depended upon to reform themselves, when high-paid executives are in virtually unchallenged control of management. The mere fact that a company not paying dividends has disbursed approximately $800,000 of funds belonging to stockholders to oppose a particular regulatory measure is proof that some sort of regulation is greatly needed. The evils of such irresponsible spending practices, however, are traceable to lack of adequate control over the managements of holding companies. They are not inherent in the form of organization, nor confined to public utilities.

Indeed, in numerous cases executive heads of corporations drawing good salaries succeed for years in retaining their hold over concerns whose resources are being gradually depleted at the expense of stockholders. The funds do not go to finance lobbies, but they are used to cover operating deficits until surpluses disappear and reorganization or liquidation becomes inevitable.

In short, the Senate investigation into lobbying has merely stressed the pressing need for simplification and reorganization of top-heavy holding companies with grasping managements. It has also shown that continuous supervision and effective regulation by the Federal Government are required to protect the interests of stockholders as well as consumers. There is no warrant for misinterpreting the lesson conveyed by recent unsavory disclosures and citing the evidence as an argument in favor of a destructive form of holding company legislation.

Copyright Fantasies.

Imagination is the foundation of literature. It is an attribute of every creative artist. It has always been able to materialize the unknown and to give names to airy nothings. But unfortunately imagination can be very apt at creating completely absurd hobgoblins.

Certain communications on the subject of the pending Duffy copyright bill, recently received by Senators from authors and composers, form a case in point. These argue that the bill will cause an "invasion" of "foreign" works in competition with the product of their American talent.

Those who recognize that art is from its nature cosmopolitan will properly resent any form of protective tariff against the songs and stories of other lands. But let that pass. What the Duffy bill actually does is to increase copyright security for the authors of other countries in return for similar security in such countries for the writers of the United States. The proposed new reciprocal rights against copying, to be accorded to foreigners, are altogether misinterpreted when it is held that they would only further sales of copyrighted works to American consumers who would otherwise patronize native industry.

Increased copyright protection, of course, does not insure the sale of the copyrighted work. It merely discourages the pirating of such work. In the old days, when American law granted to the authors of other countries no copyright at all, American authors languished because of the competition of foreign works of literature that the publishers did not have to pay for. International copyright protection reduced this "invasion" from abroad. The added copyright security offered by the Duffy bill will still further decrease piracy and with it the only foreign competition that a copyright law can affect.

Alas for the frailties of inspired propaganda! The innocent composers of the senatorial missives should copyright them as rare gems in the realms of fantasy. Agreed that the Nation's lawmakers need some diversion at this stage of the session. But if all of the arguments against the excellent Duffy bill are like this one, it should pass without more ado about nothing.

The Light Tap.

In the obituary notices of former Senator Gillett, Speaker of the House for six years and one of the few to advance to the upper chamber of Congress, it was remarked that he was noted for the lightness with which he tapped the gavel of his office. Yet it is a matter of record that he controlled the House with as much effect as many of his more smithy-minded predecessors.

Never a seeker of publicity, his nomination to the Speakership to succeed Champ Clark came as a surprise to the Nation generally. But to his colleagues of the House, with whom he had served for 26 years as Congressman from Massachusetts, he was known for an industrious and competent legislator. Six years as Speaker confirmed their knowledge that he was a courteous, dignified and straight-forward gentleman, well worthy of the exacting honor. And the following six years in the Senate marked him for the electorate at large as a legislator of uncommon ability, courageous even to the point of doing the unpopular thing so long as it was in accord with his conservative concept of the theory of a representative democracy.

Elihu Root's description of him has often been told. He once remarked, after the Senator had called on behalf of a constituent, that in the level-eyed New Englander could be seen "the necessities of politics struggling with the instincts of a gentleman." The resultant compromise was implicit in the touch given to his gavel by Speaker Gillett.

Chairman Fletcher fears—again—that the New Dealers will subvert the Constitution. Considering what they have already done to it, another subversion would set it right side up.

A Bad Bill.

From the Saturday Review of Literature.

An "incitement to disaffection bill" has recently passed the Senate and will come before the House. This bill penalizes "whoever advises, counsels, urges, or solicits any member of the military or naval forces of the United States, including the reserves thereof (National Guard), to disobey the laws or regulations governing such military or naval forces, or whoever publishes or distributes any book . . ." counseling disobedience.

Now the purpose of the sponsor of this bill and also the motives of the Senate may have been excellent. Nevertheless, it should be evident that once passed such a law would make it possible to suppress all books which discuss war as an evil and futile thing, and make difficult or impossible any criticism of militarism or navalism as such. Which is precisely what has been brought about in Nazi Germany and Fascist Italy with results which we have no cause to envy. The spread of disobedience in our armed forces is already covered by existing laws. This bill contributes nothing except a means of suppressing criticism. It is a bad bill which should be killed in the House.

Letters To The Editor.

The Post welcomes letters from its readers. All communications must be signed with the writer's name and address. Upon publication initials or pen names will be used if requested. Letters are subject to condensation, and in no case should they exceed 250 words.

A Forward Step.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: That a bill has been introduced to abolish compulsory military training in civil schools and colleges is indeed a forward step, and Senator Nye and Representative Kvale are to be congratulated upon sponsoring such a bill.

In this enlightened day it seems incredible that a condition should be allowed to continue which causes the violation of individual rights in matters educational, ethical and religious. Success to the bill!

Protests Divorce Revision.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial, "A Saner Divorce Law," of July 24, does not mirror the opinion of many of your readers. I believe the passage of such a bill would weaken the already crumbling home life of many of our people.

Let the divorce seekers be driven to Reno, Arkansas or Mexico!

Tobacco In Institutions.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Post of July 25, says A. P. Bell, superintendent of Pruntytown, W. Va., State Industrial School for Boys, has banned tobacco chewing by boys in the institution, for which it has no funds.

Surely all other State reformatories, prisons, almshouses, etc., should likewise ban tobacco; to so reform their inmates that, when released therefrom, they would be rid of these costly, dangerous, health-destroying habits, and be able to easier support themselves, and not be driven back to crime again for lack of money.

Qualms For Constitution In 1846.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Critics of the Roosevelt Administration are filling the papers and the air with fervid charges that the Constitution is being grossly violated.

This hubbub reminds me of an editorial I read recently in the Washington Daily National Intelligencer of May 13, 1846. Upon the recommendation of President James K. Polk, the Congress had just declared the existence of a state of war with Mexico, and made an appropriation for prosecution of the war. In criticizing that action the editor of the Intelligencer declared it to be "additional evidence of the feebleness of the Constitution of the United States which has already become a dead letter whenever it comes in conflict with executive power, or a party purpose in Congress."

Juvenile Court Delay.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I would appreciate some enlightenment on this matter: A man, through a court order, made a payment for support of his child on July 13.

Wanting to get some information as to the cause for delay in transmitting the money, I made inquiry on July 19, and was informed by a clerk in one of the offices in Juvenile Court that "I can't help it." A telephone call to the District Building on July 22 elicited the nonchalant assurance that "you'll probably get it today or tomorrow."

It would seem that any investigation or official recording could be taken care of in less time. So on behalf of those who may need the checks a little more urgently, I ask who or what is responsible for such delay?

Street Car Sentiments.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: To eliminate direct car service from Takoma Park, via Fourteenth street, will work a hardship to many patrons of the present service. In my family we do our Saturday shopping at the Arcade Market and through lack of the car service, we, like many other families, will be forced to buy elsewhere.

My personal opinion of the contemplated change is that the person or persons passing on it are unfamiliar with the flow of traffic in Washington, and disregard entirely the wishes of street car patrons.

DAILY RIDER.
Takoma Park, Md., July 30.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I noticed one of the letters in your paper of July 29 about the tearing up of the tracks from Fourteenth street to Georgia avenue on Kennedy street. The writer has tried his utmost to stop that, and instead to promote the installation of a double track on Kennedy street, from the plow pit on Fourteenth street.

If they tear up the tracks, it will show protests, as a rule, are not noticed or acted upon by the Public Utilities Commission.

What I advocate is more modern street cars and fewer buses—I hope they will still continue the tracks from Georgia avenue on Butternut to Fourth street. If not, it will again be a slap in the face for the street car patrons, making them walk or either ride a bus.

Horsepower And Traffic Fatalities.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Our automobiles have killed more Americans than all our foreign enemies have killed in battle in all our wars. In fact, our automobiles have killed more in the last ten years. In ten years they have killed 291,061. Our enemies have killed only 244,357 in battle. Last year our automobiles killed 36,000 and injured 1,250,000, or 1 person in each hundred throughout the Nation. One hundred thousand of these injured ones were crippled for life. We now have an army of cripples a million strong, crippled for life by automobiles. We have thousands of horror-stricken drivers who have unintentionally maimed a fellow being. We call our automobiles pleasure cars, but they bring us sorrow and suffering and death.

What has been done about it?

The Red Cross is establishing 15,000 first-aid stations for the injured.

We have adopted four-wheel brakes, windshield wipers, low-slung cars. We have safety highways, improved traffic regulations, traffic lights, licensing of drivers, educational campaigns, law-enforcement campaigns. All have helped.

From 1913 to 1926 the death rate per thousand cars on the road was reduced from 3.067 to 1.059; but in 1927 speedier cars came into general use, cars which traveled 55 miles per hour or faster. The death rate climbed back up to 1.109. Sixty-five-mile-an-hour cars came and the death rate went still higher. In 1933 it stood at 1.30. In 1934 we got superpowered cars doing 85 miles an hour and the death rate jumped to 1.45, a 10 per cent jump in one year.

Brakes were better than ever before, highways were better, traffic regulations were better, licensing of drivers was more generally practiced, law enforcement was more rigid and all of these things admittedly are helpful, but in spite of them, with the superpowered cars on the road, the death rate jumped 10 per cent in one year.

One of the lightest cars on the market is equipped with a 90-horsepower engine. A 30-horsepower engine would be strong enough to drive this car at any reasonable speed. The additional 60 horsepower is superpower used chiefly to kill and cripple people. If a superpowered car gets out of control it instantly becomes a menace to human life. It easily climbs up on sidewalks or loading platforms or runs through fences or hedges and across lots to kill people. If a pedestrian steps unexpectedly in front of a superpowered car the driver may fail to disengage the clutch. He must then kill the 90-horsepower engine with the brakes or kill the pedestrian. The 90-horsepower engine is hard to kill.

Outside of city limits and beyond the influence of traffic officers the driver is tempted to press the accelerator. The car responds smoothly and swiftly and the speed gets higher than the driver intended. At some unexpected curve the car collides with another car or runs off the road and death comes to the passengers. Thousands of people were killed that way last year and tens of thousands crippled.

What can be done about this?

One very effective thing could be done which has not yet been tried. Engine power could be limited to reasonable power at the factory. No pleasure car needs a 90-horsepower engine or a speed of 85 miles an hour. Yet over half a dozen makes of cars are powered with 90-horsepower engines and allegedly can make 85 miles per hour. Thirty-horsepower engines would be strong enough for these cars. The additional 60 horsepower is superpower put in to sell the cars and to kill people. The death rate is now 50 per cent higher than it was in 1926, when we used 30-horsepower engines. If we went back to the 30-horsepower engines of 1926 we could go back to the low death rate of 1926 and save 10,000 people from death each year and 400,000 from injury. We could save more than that, for our safety devices are all better than they were in 1926. Our brakes, especially, are far better. In 1926 half of the cars had wretchedly poor brakes.

Our car manufacturers have gone crazy over power and speed. They advertise power and speed as selling points, but they do not mention the menace of the high-powered engines. Buyers of these cars do not realize the danger lurking in the engines ready to kill. We need a national law limiting the horsepower and speed of pleasure cars to reasonable power and speed.

Counsel For The Defense.

Post Office, Thursday.

YOU may remember the American lawyer who drank poison, to prove his client's innocence. In a French court, the other day, a defending lawyer went a great deal further along a similar road, and the French press has been full of it.

The American's client was accused of poisoning his wife. There was produced in evidence a remaining quantity of the liquid which, it had been proved, he did administer to the victim. An expert, analyzing this stuff, swore it contained the drug that caused the woman's death. Was the left-over draught sufficient to cause death? Undoubtedly, said the expert.

Thereupon the lawyer began his plea to the jury by declaring that, analysis or no analysis, the liquid was harmless. Under the noses of those 12 good men and true, he drank the dose—and didn't die.

There's the gist of the old American story. Now for the new French one.

M. Henriot had long been the state prosecutor, the district attorney, for a remote portion of Brittany—and he bore the reputation of a stern official. His wife was Junoesque. Their only child, Michel, now in his twenties, was called "peculiar," was undeniably a shy solitary, and had suffered at school all those torments of bullying which such a temperament invites from the abnormal cruelty of normal classmates.

What else Michel was none have a few gossiping neighbors guessed. His parents guarded their secret.

Three attempts to marry him off failed; there were just enough rumors for that. But at last a match was made. No wife being available among the local bourgeoisie, he was married to a subnormal daughter of humble peasants: Georgette Degalve, who seems to have been disliked by her parents and whose sole confidante was her sister, Marie—too timid and repressed to be of any help.

The happy couple removed to Michel's successful silver-fox farm. It lay miles from anywhere, along the rocky shores of a lonely lake in a somber countryside sparsely populated. A dangerous district: the supposedly unpractical husband insured the life of his spouse.

Then she began writing letters to her sister: letters terrified and terrifying. Horrible things were happening in that solitary farmhouse beside the desolate lake. Subsequently produced at the trial, these letters read like a thorough resume of Krafft-Ebing's once monumental volume.

Yet the immediate effect? When Marie tried to tell her mother, Mere Degalve shrugged: Georgette had always been "given to exaggeration!" And, since this came as a maternal dictum, dutiful daughter Marie accepted it as final.

Nevertheless, it wasn't final. Georgette resisted her husband. He murdered her. The crime was brought home to him; he himself was brought to trial.

The evidence defied detailed publication. On the witness stand, the accused's father, that former district attorney, muttered:

"I, who have so seldom asked pity for other culprits—I find it almost impossible now to ask pity for my son."

And Michel's mother cried: "O, my poor boy—though I seek pardon of the Degalves for the wrong I did in permitting the marriage, I beg still more fervently that you will forgive me for ever having brought you into this world!"

For a defense, the lawyers could put forward nothing except insanity. But there was that sanely calculating insurance policy which Michel had taken out upon the life of Georgette! Were, then, her letters indeed the fables of an enfeebled mind? Wasn't the murder motive merely mercenary? A man as mad as this wife had pictured her husband: could he run a successful silver-fox farm?

The leading defense lawyer was famous at the Paris bar, distinguished for his logical mind, his business acumen; he had never before appeared in a capital case. But, writes Tharaud in the Paris-Soir, he pleaded "as I believe no lawyer ever before has. With an unheard of audacity, scorning every human reserve, he tossed into the debate . . . his own inner self." His first words indicate sufficiently his argument:

"Gentlemen of the jury, you have the good fortune to possess normal nerves. I have for 30 years been a neuropathic victim. At times I pass through frightful agonies, skirt the coasts of terrible countries . . . And that is why I have accepted this brief and defend this miserable and unbalanced creature!"

The accused escaped the guillotine. He was let off with a sentence of 20 years at hard labor. . . .

But that American lawyer who, years ago, took the poison-evidence? His client was acquitted. The lawyer had preceded the poison with a surreptitious dose of aldote.

Fair Enough

Sin Survey Secrets.

IT is reported from Detroit, where Father Coughlin started, that the Rev. J. Frank Norris, of Fort Worth, Tex., a fundamentalist, prohibitionist, late adherent of the Ku Klux Klan, has established a rival pitch. Dr. Norris is said to have announced an intention to go on tour preaching against the social and economic program of the so-called radio priest.

The Rev. Dr. Norris, who is distinguished for having shot and killed an unarmed man in self-defense in the study of his tabernacle in Fort Worth, is known far and wide in the southwestern part of the country as the Texas Tornado. Apropos this title, it was observed years ago on the occasion of his appearance in New York, as guest revivalist in the pulpit of the late John Roach Straton, of Calvary Baptist Church, that a tornado is a vacuum entirely surrounded by wind.

Dr. Norris attacked sin in New York at an inopportune time, landing here at a period when Mr. Dominick Henry was inspector of the Fourth, or Tenderloin, police inspection district. Whatever the shortcomings of Inspector Henry may have been, and he was indicted on one occasion, his bitterest enemies gave him credit for an old-fashioned piety in matters of sexual morality and acknowledged his active abhorrence of prostitution, with particular emphasis on the males who profit by the vice of public women. The Tenderloin, therefore, was remarkably clean as to prostitution.

Moreover, prohibition was new at the time and the underworld had not established diplomatic and trade treaties with the prohibition enforcement agencies. Therefore, the town was crawling with detectives and investigators in the employ of the Government and the Anti-Saloon League and there was really nothing doing in New York just then. New York was a dead town.

• • • •

DR. STRATON had not yet begun to gibber in unknown tongues, a gift which descended on him in the latter stages of his decline, and was famous at the moment for having conducted a survey of the night life of Broadway under the guidance of Mr. Harry Payne Burton, then editor of the Newspaper Enterprise Association. Mr. Burton, current editor of Mr. Hearst's Cosmopolitan magazine, for lack of anything better to do, had disguised Dr. Straton as a bon vivant and escorted him through the dance halls and chop suey joints of the so-called Rialto in one of those pub-crawling expeditions, which, when undertaken by preachers, are called "surveys."

By prearrangement, Dr. Straton let fly his opening cry of alarm from his pulpit simultaneously with the release of Mr. Burton's first article. It was all very scandalous and very well done and their timing was perfect, so Dr. Straton became famous throughout the land.

By the time the vacuum entirely surrounded by wind reached town, therefore, the carcass of vice, the monster, had been picked clean.

Nevertheless, publicity being very poor, Dr. Norris accepted an invitation from another news "feature" syndicate, familiarly known as the Wine, Women and Song Service, now defunct, to "survey" the horrors of the City of Terrible Night, and your correspondent was delegated to guide him. On a salary of $60 a week in the memorable post-war profiteering era, your correspondent's normal cruising radius was restricted to the movies and an occasional club sandwich in the Astor Grill, but, with an expense roll of $25, the two surveyors set out one night on the dreariest hunt that ever foiled a well-laid plan of mouse or man.

• • • •

AT the Little Club, a pioneer night club beneath the stage of the Norah Bayes Theater, a man named Val, the manager, gave the Texas Tornado, in his checkerboard suit, a cold stare and told him that he couldn't serve him no whisky because he didn't have no whisky nor no gin neither. The Tornado compromised on a vicious steak sandwich, with Bermuda onion, and the survey moved on. It was wrong and your correspondent repents, but the survey was dying and there had to be something to show for the expense roll of $25, so your correspondent led the Tornado through the side streets and pointed out to him as opium dens and notorious sin-bowers various brownstone boarding houses inhabited by obscure hoofers, acrobats, midgets, and stilt-walkers.

At Al Wood's show, "Ladies' Night," the Tornado was about to interrupt the historic brassiere bit known as the strip-poker scene, but your correspondent, the fool, yanked him down by the coat tails. The late Phil Payne, then editor of the News, never forgave that, but he had a marvelous instinct for a story.

At 1 a. m., leg-weary, depressed and bored, your correspondent asked God's own man from Fort Worth just how far he might go in ghosting the "survey" under his name, considering that not so much as a game of checkers had been turned up with the $25.

The Texas Tornado issued a carte blanche:

"Just give 'em some good headliners," he said.

God certainly picks some curious personnel to represent him to the trade.

Action Wanted

William Lyon Phelps

WELL, as I was saying yesterday, the publishers (Frederick A. Stokes Co., New York) had just sent me a new murder story by Carroll J. Daly, and I read every word of it during the day. It is called "Murder in the East," and is a super-thriller. If you like this kind of thing (and I do) this is just the sort of thing you will like; and if you do not like this sort of thing, be sure not to read this particular book, for it is just this sort of thing raised to the nth power.

Be not deceived. In recommending this novel, I am under no illusion whatever, and I am well aware that there are many of my readers, nobler and wiser than I, to whom it will seem trash; and unless I give them fair warning, they might well wonder, why I, who delight in the poetry of Milton and the prose of Plato, could possibly seriously recommend such a farrago of impossible adventures. I advise them to read something else.

• • • •

Now in reading murder stories, I am no Laodicean. I like them either cold as the grave or hot as St. Louis in August; too many murder stories are lukewarm.

On the jacket of this novel, "Murder in the East," you will see a girl chained to the wall, a gigantic Negro torturer, the calm, smiling, heartless villain and the hero, who has come to save the girl. Do you like this sort of thing? I love it.

That is to say, when I read murder stories, I want first, action; second, action; third, action.

The New Tax Program

Steeper Surtaxes to Mean Flight of Wealth Into Stagnation.

The Post presents herewith the fourth of a series of seven analytical articles on the tax proposals now under congressional consideration. The author is professor of finance at New York University and an outstanding authority in this field.

By Dr. Jules I. Bogen.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

THE President's special message to Congress of June 19 urged that the principle of progressive taxation should be extended to that part of any income that exceeds $1,000,000. The entire increment above $1,000,000 is now subject to a tax rate of 63 per cent. The Ways and Means Committee of the House has devised new rates of surtaxes for larger incomes, so that annual incomes above $5,000,000 are to be subject to a maximum normal and surtax rate of 79 per cent.

There can be little quarrel with the logic of a reasonable extension of the progression principle to higher income brackets. However, purely as a revenue matter, this proposal is trifling in character. In 1932 only 20 persons, and in 1933 only 46, would have been affected by it. In fact, the added revenue would be purely negligible unless substantially increased surtax rates are applied much more broadly. If they are imposed on all incomes exceeding $50,000, the Ways and Means Committee roughly estimates an added yield of $45,000,000 per year.

The income tax, because of its direct character and because it tends to reflect with relative accuracy the ability to pay of the taxpayer, is the best known method of raising large sums of money for a government. Hence, if more revenue is needed by the Federal Treasury, serious consideration should be given to changes in income tax rates and administrative provisions with this end in view. Income taxation, in fact, has become the central feature of our tax system. As part of a broad tax revision program, therefore, the suggestion of merely increasing surtax rates, already near the confiscatory level, on incomes above $1,000,000 and even $50,000 is trivial and beside the point.

• • • •

THE record of the personal income tax through recent years has not been an impressive one. One sound canon of taxation is that the yield of a tax should be as far as possible uniform and predictable, so that the Government can guide its financial affairs accordingly. Actually, however, few taxes have displayed such wide variation in yield from year to year as has the personal income tax. This is illustrated in the following record of actual collections from this impost (in millions of dollars):

Fiscal year ended June 30	Personal income tax collections
1927	912
1928	883
1929	1,096
1931	834
1932	427
1933	353

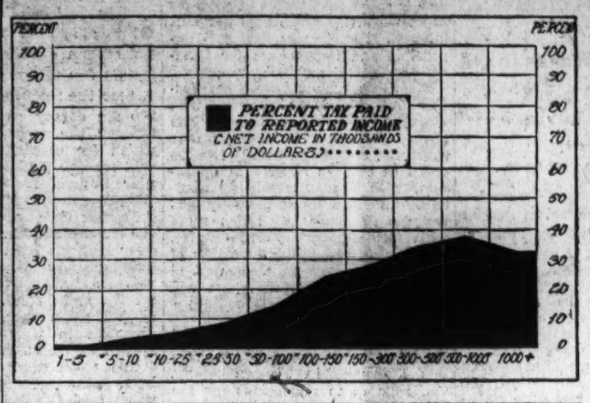
Some steps have been taken, it is true, toward correcting such wide fluctuations in collections. The tax on capital gains has been modified so as to reduce the Treasury's reliance upon short-term speculative profits, which have been responsible for a substantial part of the extremely erratic variations in yield. But the further modification of the income tax so as to make its yield more regular and certain deserves a great deal of additional intensive study, particularly in view of the ability of other countries to keep their revenue from such taxation fairly even as compared with our own showing.

In order to enhance the amount and uniformity of collections from the personal income tax, and in order to make it more truly the chief channel through which all classes of the population may contribute to the support of the Government, extensive revisions in rate schedules are urgently needed. Thus, for 1933, 3,660,105 individuals filed personal income tax returns. Of these, fully 1,928,989 paid no taxes at all, since the many deductions authorized by law exceeded the net income they reported. There were 1,731,116 taxable returns, on which taxes of $373,000,000 were assessed.

Proportion of Taxes Paid to Incomes



Only 320,500 persons reported net incomes of more than $5,000. These persons, with total net income of $4,053,6[illegible]000, contributed $333,000,000 to the Federal Treasury. The remaining 3,339,602 individuals, who filed returns, therefore, with an aggregate reported net income of $6,792,000,000, paid somewhat less than $40,000,000 in income taxes.

• • • •

THE group earning more than $5,000 of net income yearly paid to the Government a little more than 8 per cent of its income. The group earning less than $5,000 of income paid considerably less than 1 per cent of its total earnings in income taxes.

The number of income taxpayers, it will be noted, was actually less than 1.5 per cent of the population of the country, while all those filing returns represented about 3 per cent.

The situation thus reveals a startling lack of correspondence between the number of income taxpayers and the number of voters. This is not to say that the individual of small income is not heavily taxed in this country. Federal excise taxes, customs duties, State sales and other taxes and local real estate and other imposts mount up to a very heavy aggregate burden for the average individual. But these taxes are in large measure indirect, and it requires a major intellectual effort for the average citizen to estimate even roughly what he is contributing through taxation to the support of the Government.

The income tax, on the other hand, is direct and brutal. The payer is required to cast up his income for the year, and to assess himself for a part of that income, which often already has been spent, to contribute to the needs of the Federal Givernment. There is no better check on governmental extravagance and loose budgetary practice, therefore, than a very broad income tax, which takes in as many voters as possible. The electorate will thus be made really tax conscious, and it will then hold its representatives more strictly to sane and moderate spending policies.

GREAT BRITAIN has gone a long way toward achieving this desideratum. The commissioners of inland revenue there estimate that in the fiscal year 1933-34 there were about 7,800,000 persons in the United Kingdom who had income sufficient to make them possible subjects to income taxes at the rates there prevailing. Of these, 4,400,000 had allowances which relieved them from taxes, while the other 3,400,000 individuals paid £227,000,000. Thus, 7.3 per cent of the total population of the United Kingdom paid income taxes, while only 1.5 per cent of the population of the United States were required to pay Federal income tax in 1933.

The British principle of income taxation is to have the person of small income make a contribution, however slight, to the needs of the government. On a net income of £200, a tax of less than one-half of 1 per cent may be levied. The contention has been advanced that the cost of collecting taxes on quite small incomes is often greater than the amount involved, so that they do not contribute materially to the government's income. Collection of taxes at the source, common in Great Britain, helps get around this objection. Even if this argument were so, and it is highly doubtful, there would be a positive value in low rates of taxes on small incomes as a check on loose governmental spending.

It is significant that the British budget has been balanced since 1931, while we have been building up new high record peace-time deficits.

There has been painfully apparent in this country a growing tendency on the part of large sections of the population to regard the Government primarily as an easy source of cash. A more nearly universal application of the income tax would be an effective way to modify this popular viewpoint, and it must be modified before long to avoid disaster. This is the approach that proposals to reform income taxation in this country should take.

Suggestions of increasing surtax rates in the extreme upper brackets are unfortunate, therefore, chiefly because they divert attention from the really pressing need for broadening and making more democratic the base of our income taxation. They also set a bad precedent to State governments, which are thereby encouraged to increase the scale of progression of their own income tax schedules, and thus to move further toward complete confiscation of upper income brackets.

• • • •

NEEDLESS to say, confiscatory income taxation tends to defeat itself through encouraging a flight to tax-exempt securities and nonincome-bearing property. Particularly at a time when business recovery is so urgently desired, encouragement to capital to enter nonproductive channels is hardly a logical course of action. Also, postwar experience has amply demonstrated the fact that high income taxes give distinct encouragement to municipal extravagance. By placing a high artificial premium upon the purchase of State and local government bonds by wealthy investors, they facilitate the sale of obligations of debt-ridden political entities that do not deserve new credits.

The President proposes to shut off escape from very high surtaxes through elimination of the tax exemption feature in new issues of Government and Government guaranteed obligations. The feasibility of this proposal will be discussed in the next article of this series.

Bookworm Questions II.

SINCE the body, these hot summer days, can't be active very long with any real degree of pleasure, it's rather better to give the mind a work-out. With this pious thought, then let me introduce the second batch of Bookworm Questions for your wits' delectation.

Some of them can be worked out by a conscientious application of gray matter. Some are of that tricky kind which you can answer at once if you happen to know, and you can't in a month of Sundays if you don't. These happen to be the sort which get me hot under the collar, so my passing the ilk along to you is just plain malicious. The answers will appear in this space tomorrow.

1. Only one of the statements following each of these authors names is true. Which is it?

Juvenal—was a medieval historian who wrote "Concerning the Deaths of the Kings of the Kings of France—was a Latin satirist—is famous for his saying: "The woman is the leader in the deed."

Richard Halliburton—once swam across the Amazon River—wrote "The Regal Way to Romance"—tells in a certain book how he dived one night into the pool of the Taj Mahal, which happens to be something less than 18 inches deep.

James Truslow Adams—is the official historian for the State of Massachusetts—worked his way up from office boy until he became a partner in a New York Stock Exchange firm—is of half Cuban blood.

Dorothy Sayers—took first honors at Oxford in medieval literature—modeled Lord Peter Wimsey on a combination of young Randolph Churchill and Evelyn Waugh—donates the receipts of her detective anthologies to the Detective Writers' Club of England.

Stuart Chase—took his bride on a honeymoon to Greenland to study a primitive economic system—won Life's $500 prize, in 1924, for a short essay on "How to Prevent War"—is a Certified Public Accountant.

2. The August issue of Vanity Fair holds positively the great-grandfather, in difficulty, of literary questionnaires—50 questions, suggestions by 25 prominent men and women. Here I borrow three of them, and believe me, they are far and away the easiest.

Tess Slesinger asks—What great American short-story writer went to Mexico, disappeared, and was never heard of again?

Henry Seidel Canby editor of the Saturday Review of Literature, asks—What great American war story was written by a man who had never seen a battle?

Clifton Fadiman, book critic of The New Yorker, asks—What have the following literary figures in common: Stirling, Simple, Grimm, Bell, Whiffle, Paltock, Fleming, Wimsey, Quince, Belloc and Rabbit?

4. The Professional Sherlock Holmes fans, of whom the woods are full, will find these perfectly easy. But let the willing amateur try them.

In what story and in what year did Sherlock Holmes first appear?

What first name was Conan Doyle going to bestow upon Holmes before he hit on Sherlock?

Where did Conan Doyle get the Holmes part, and why did he choose it?

What was the original and discarded name for Dr. Watson?

Give Dr. Watson's first name and the middle initial.

What was the first name of Holmes' older brother?

5. Here's a ring-tailed stumper to test your knowledge of world literature, and one most of us could work on all night.

Arrange the following well known and classic works in the chronological order of their appearance. Just that—no dates or other specifications.

Milton's "Paradise Lost"—The "Koran"—"Huckleberry Finn"—Sir (now Saint) Thomas More's "Utopia"—Moliere's "The Misanthrope"—"The Three Musketeers"—Masefield's "The Dauber"—Boccacio's "Decameron"—Kipling's "Plain Tales From the Hills"—"The Last of the Mohicans"—Dante's "Divine Comedy"—Maeterlinck's "The Blue Bird"—Tolstoy's "War and Peace"—Rabelais' "Gargantua"—"Treasure Island"—"Robinson Crusoe" (part 1)—"Alice in Wonderland"—"Hamlet" (first acted)—"Ivanhoe"—Ibsen's "The Doll's House"—"Canterbury Tales"—"Gulliver's Travels"—Boswell's "Life of Johnson"—Voltaire's "Candide"—"Pilgrim's Progress"—Shaw's "Man and Superman"—"Pride and Prejudice"—"The Return of the Native"—"Don Quixote" (part 1)—"Tom Jones"—"Pickwick Papers."

And that, I should think, should bring to a climax today's little test.

A Million Cartwheels Roll

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, July 31.—A million silver dollars rolled through the streets of Philadelphia, and no one made a grab for one of them.

It was just as well that no one did.

He wouldn't have lived to spend the money.

For all around the innocent looking little white bags in the mail truck caravan that rolled from the United States Mint to the railroad station were machine guns and pistols.

The little white bags might well have been salt or sugar instead of $1,000,000 in silver cartwheels for the United States Treasury vaults at Washington.

The moving was done so quietly the crowds on the street didn't even look around.

Twenty million silver dollars will move the same quiet way before the transfer is complete.

Reorganization Plan Given ICC For Railroad

Van Sweringen Submits Missouri Proposal to Commission.

By the Associated Press.

Reorganization of the Missouri Pacific Railroad system was proposed to the Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday on a basis which would reduce from 49 to 36 per cent the stock holdings of the IlleghanyCorporation,a TAOOIN A Alleghany Corporation, a Van Sweringen concern.

The plan, submitted by O. P. Van Sweringen, chairman, on behalf of the Missouri Pacific board of directors, contemplates consolidation of the Missouri Pacific with 30 subsidiaries to create a vast network of some 15,000 miles of railroad lines.

It is opposed by a committee for Missouri Pacific refunding bonds headed by John S. Stedman, vice president of the Prudential Life Insurance Co. of New York, which has indicated it will file a counterplan.

Plea for Aid Made.

A few hours before the Van Sweringen proposal was field, the independent committee for Missouri Pacifi Railroad bond holders, assailing the railroad financing operations of the Van Sweringen interests of Cleveland, appealed to the Reconstruction Corporation to "aid investors and not the Van Sweringens" in any plan for reorganization which the latter proposed. The Missouri Pacific has been in the hands of trustees for more than two years.

The reorganization plan provides for consolidation of 83 existing forms of indebtedness into three classes and the substitution of two issues for the 33 varities of outstanding stock—one of 1,053,554 shares of no par value common and 620,630 shares of no par value noncumulative first preferred.

Issues of 4 per cent fixed-interest first mortgage bonds, 5 per cent convertible income general mortgage bonds, and 4 per cent convertible income notes would replace the system's present multiple form of indebtedness.

In the exchange of securities embraced in the plan, the board estimated that annual fixed charges would be reduced from the present $24,878,524 to $7,503,330.

The RFC, from which the Missouri Pacific has borrowed funds, would be given the right to reject any two members of the proposed 15-man board of directors so long as it owned any of the company's bonds.

May Reject Members.

Common stockholders would be given the right to reject any five board members; holders of preferred stock, three; holders of general mortgage bonds, three, and holders of convertible notes, two.

In presenting the plan, the board of directors transmitted a letter to Missouri Pacific security holders asserting that "in spite of present conditions, there is reason to believe that a great future will open before this system when it emerges from reorganization."

It described the plan as "an earnest effort to respect the rights and preferences of every interest and at the same time erect upon an enduring foundation a financial structure adapted to the needs of the company and its obligations to the public which it serves."

After a hearing, the Interstate Commerce Commission may approve the plan and recommend it to the court under the bankruptcy law or submit a plan of its own. A ratification vote of security holders would be necessary to put any plan into effect.

The Alleghany Corporations would exchange its present $11,152,000 in bonds for the new preferred stock on the basis of 10 shares for each $1,000 bonds. It would exchange 190,000 shares of existing preferred stock for 190,000 of the new common, and for its present 570,000 shares of common it would receive new common stock on the basis of one share of new for two and a half shares of old.

Utilities Plan Big Expansion Of Rural Lines

Farm Electrification Costing Millions May Be Recovery Factor.

meters, transformers and services to accommodate 351,000 prospective customers.

The remaining $124,564,000 would be spent by the prospective customers in house wiring, making service extensions and in the purchase of electrical appliances. It is proposed that the Rural Electrification Administration, for which $100,000,000 had been earmarked, would advance the necessary funds to the operating companies and that another Government agency, similar to the Electric Home and Farm Authority, would finance the needs of customers.

Drawn by Committee.

This program was drawn up by a committee of seven representatives of the electrical utility industry, headed by W. W. Freeman, vice president of the Coumbia Gas and Electrical Co. They made a nationwide survey to ascertain to what extent the private utilities would be able and willing to use Government funds for rural electrification.

In a letter to Freeman yesterday, Cooke expressed enthusiasm for the program formulated by the committee, pointing out that "the carrying out of your plans in entirety would make it necessary for the Government materially to expand its program of rural electrification."

"This would be necessary," he added, "because we have many sound projects pending, submitted individually and in substantial part by public bodies and farm cooerap tives, for which funds must and will be provided. More projects of this kind are shaping up. I feel confident, however, that our program can be enlarged sufficiently to take care of all the projects you contemplate, as and when they are put into more concrete form."

Suggestions Accepted.

Cooke in effect accepted all the major suggestions of the utility committee, except that he contended loans to operating companies should be amortized over a 20-year period, instead of 25 years as suggested by the committee, as a general rule, although he conceded that a longer period might be agreed on in exceptional cases.

He also took exception to a contention made by the committee that "the problem of the farmer is not one of rates, but of financing the wiring and purchase of appliances," which call for an average outlay of $354 for each customer, or about seven times the annual bill for electric service. It was for that reason that the committee urged Government aid in financing wiring and appliance costs as easy terms for consumers.

Cooke replied he could not concur in the contention that "the problem of the farmer is not one of rates," but that, "on the contrary, we hold rate simplification and even rate reductions over large areas to be the heart of the problem of electrifying rural America" and added that "naturally, in weighing the relative desirability of loans it will be necessary for REA to consider carefully existing and proposed rate structures with reference to developing large use essential to the success of our program."

Direct Contracts.

Execution of the proposed program will be through direct contracts with individual operating companies and as fast as the latter make applications for loans the REA will examine and pass on them. Cooke asserted that "our routines have been established and the maximum of activity is now our desire."

Theex change of letters between Cooke and the private electrical utility industry was regarded as interesting and significant, aside fr om the size of the proposed program. It indicated that a large part of the Administration's rural electrification program will be carried out through existing private enterprise.

When the REA was created there was widespread fear in the utility field that it meant another excursion of the Government on a large scale into the electrical power business. But instead of devoting its chief activities to developing public ownership, it now appears that the REA plans to achieve rural electrification thruogh private operation.

Mutual Benefit.

Still another interesting aspect of this development is the revelation that an agency of the Roosevelt Administration has worked in close accord with representatives of the electrical utilities in formulating a program of mutual benefit at the same time that the Administration and the electrical utilities, chiefly the holding companies, have been engaged in a terrific struggle on Capitol Hill over the utility holding company bill.

The committee which formulated the program included representatives of several companies which have figured in the battle against the utility holding compnay "death sentence" bill. Indeed, representatives of two holding companies were included on the committee, Hudson W. Reed, of the United Gas Improvement Co., and H. F. Smiddy, of the Electric Bond & Share Co.

This committee, Cooke said, "has rendered the Government, as well as private interests it represents, a very real service in the clarification of an important undertaking."

Corn-Hog Total Tops 8 Millions

By the Associated Press.

Corn-hog payments to 1935 contract signers passed the $8,000,000 mark yesterday as corn-hog officials predicted payments would be made slowly for a time because of the slow receipt of contracts from the field.

Claude Wickard, chief of the corn-hog section, said first payment checks have been mailed to date on about 107,000 contracts for $7,900,299. Checks have been written for $8,261,863 for 129,147 contracts. Those which have not gone out probably will be mailed tomorrow night or Thursday. More than $4,000,000 went out in the first batch of checks early Saturday morning, representing the first two days' check production from the complicated check writing machinery.

Since then the rate of production of checks has been gradually slowing down. At noon yesterday only about 47,000 more contracts had been audited ready for payment. At that time, only about 35,000 other contracts had been received here for audit from State corn-hog boards of review which are doing much of the checking work done here last year.

Domestic beet sugar growers were reported by the Agriculture Department yesterday to have received $9,530,934 in crop adjustment payments under the Jones-Costigan act up to June. The report to the Senate said $19,250,000 more will be paid on the 1934-35 crop.

Army to Test 2 More Giant Bombing Planes

Dayton, July 31 (AP).—Three new aerial battlers, including the giant four-engine Boeing bomber, tested at Seattle, Sunday, will be appraised by Army Air Corps officers in competition at Wright Field Thursday, August 22.

The two other bombers were developed by the Douglass Aircraft Co., of Santa Monica, Calif., and the Glenn L. Martin Co., of Baltimore, Md.

All three models qualify as "mystery ships" because each incorporates new features believed by the builders to be in line with the latest Army requirements for substratosphere flying.

The car Gordon occupied was driven by Mrs. Una Miller, 403 North Alfred street, and Miss Reba Donald, one of the strikers, was also a passenger. Mrs. Miller's car was thrown against another parked car, damaging both to some extent. The women were unhurt, Gordon being cut by flying glass.

Serum Rushed Here by Plane Saves Girl at Point of Death

Montgomery Child Given Chance to Recover From Illness.

Antitoxin rushed by airplane from New York apparently saved the life of Margaret Peter, 11-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter C. Peter, of Four Corners, Md., who is ill at the Homeopathic Hospital in Washington.

Doctors had given up hope that Margaret would live through the night, but yesterday she was able to read the funny papers and listen to a radio installed in her room. She was taken to the Homeopathic Hospital last Friday, where she was operated upon Saturday by Dr. J. P. Orr and treated by Dr. William A. Shannon, of Takoma Park, Md.

An infection known to the medical world as "staphylococus septicema," caused by a skin bruise on the left leg, is the cause of the child's suffering. Although she is not entirely out of danger, according to Dr. Shannon, she now has a fighting chance for her life.

Suit for $50,000 damages was filed yesterday by Mrs. Ora Lee Marlin and her infant daughter, Ruby Mae, in Montgomery County Circuit Court at Rockville, Md., against P. H. Oickle, of Clifton Park, Md.

Oickle is owner of a coal truck which struck an automobile in which William E. Marlin, husband of Mrs. Marlin, was riding February 25 at Flower and Sligo avenues, Takoma Park, Md. Marlin died from injuries suffered in the accident.

The suit alleges the truck was overloaded in violation of the law and that it was proceeding at a higher rate of speed than the legal rate of 35 miles an hour and that a number of other violations of the law contributed to the accident.

About 125 members will be the goal of the active membership drive of the Takoma Park (Md.) Library during the next two weeks. C. C. Waters, chairman of the drive, has asked each worker to bring in at least five new members.

He will be assisted by Mrs. F. A. Nichols, Mrs. S. J. Hopkins, Mrs. M. C. Tighe, Mrs. George Robertson, Mrs. A. L. Conger, Mrs. C. S. Ross, Mrs. O. M. Johnson, Mrs. L. V. Lampson, Mrs. Guy Goodman, Mrs. Arthur Toole, Mrs. E. M. Graham, Mrs. E. A. Collier, Mrs. F. A. Shumaker, Mrs. H. L. Houston, Mrs. W. H. Walker, Miss Nellie Shipman and C. D. Blachley.

Mrs. A. L. Conger was appointed historian of the library by Mrs. Frederick L. Pratt, as president, at a meeting of the board Tuesday night in the library headquarters, 806 Jackson avenue, Takoma Park, Md.

Contributions of books were received at the meeting by Mrs. Albert A. Spear, Mrs. Anna M. Shadle, Mrs. C. C. Waters and Mrs. H. Y. Dawkins.

Laura Rogers, a resident of Montgomery County, yesterday filed suit for a limited divorce from Edgar W. Rogers. The bill states that she was subjected to harsh treatment, and on several occasions ordered to leave the premises. The petition states that the couple was married on December 15, 1908, and that she was abandoned on June 6, 1935.

According to the petition, the couple have one child, who is of age, but who lives with the plaintiff.

The plaintiff alleges that the defendant drove her from her home on June 6, and claims that this constitutes desertion. She asks alimony.

Marshall Powell, colored, was injured seriously yesterday when a ditch in which he was digging for the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission at the new Glenbrook Knoll subdivision in Bethesda, Md., caved in. He was taken to Georgetown Hospital by Dr. Benjamin C. Perry, of Bethesda, who said the man's condition was serious.

Breaking open a rear window, a burglar early yesterday entered Bob's Lunchroom, operated by Robert Taylor, in Bethesda, Md., and stole $6 and a carton of cigarettes.

A cold ham dinner will be held under auspices of the Epworth League, of Epworth M. E. Church, Gaithersburg, Md., tonight at 8:30 o'clock at the church hall. Mrs. C. E. Crawford is chairman of the committee in charge.

Farm Income Is Discussed At Blacksburg

Miss Connie Bonslagel Addresses Session as 1,300 Attend.

By the Associated Press.

Blacksburg, Va., July 31.—What affects the farming business is bound to affect the farm home because there is a closer relationship between farm business and the home than in any other occupation, Miss Connie Bonslagle, State home demonstration agent of Arkansas, stated at tonight's meeting of the institute of rural affairs at Virginia Tech. More than 1,300, a record crowd for recent years, are attending.

While the object of the agricultural adjustment program, she said, is to insure better prices for farm products, the land and labor released from cash crop production offer the farm family a better type of insurance, the insurance of a year-round garden, a well-stocked pantry, a healthy, well-fed family and food dollars in the purse to spend on things that often are denied them.

The farm family that wisely takes advantage of these unaccustomed hours and acres can collect rather handsomely from its rented acres. A careful estimate of the cash value at market prices of the food required by one person for a year amounts to $119, food which can easily be grown and canned on the farm.

The effect of recent monetary changes on the income of farmers was outlined by Dr. F. A. Pearson, Cornell University, before the economics section this morning. Several hundred studied the problem by aid of charts and graphs showing production trends of commodities, and how production was affected when various countries abandoned the gold standard.

Paul W. Maris, Division of Rural Rehabilitation, conducted a panel discussion on the program of that organization at the standards of living section. The importance of a declining birth rate in this country of agriculture was emphasized by Dr. O. E. Baker, of the United States Bureau of Agricultural Economics.

Electric Light For All Fairfax Called Remote

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST,
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 126-J.

The time when electrical service will be extended into all areas of Fairfax County, Va., is very remote, according to the announcement of County Agricultural Agent H. B. Derr, and he has issued a warning to all rural home owners not to wire their places in anticipation of electrical service at an early date.

Many false hopes have been aroused among residents of the county since the Rural Electrification Administration made its offer to the county residents. The REA advised the people that it will finance electrical extensions into sections now without service under certain conditions. Derr states that these conditions are such that it would be impractical for the localities to take advantage of the Government's offer.

To obtain the Federal REA loan, co-operative organizations would have to be formed. They in turn would be required to employ the necessary officials to organize the business, purchase materials, obtain right of ways, construct the line and maintain repairs. It also would be necessary to see that every mile of line is self-liquidating and pays for itself within 20 years at 3 per cent interest. It is claimed that it is impossible and impractical for farmers to undertake such a project.

The Government would not furnish the power, Derr explained, with the result it would be necessary to purchase from the existing power company. So far the county has 270 miles of electric service in operation, with approximately 80 additional miles wholly or partially surveyed and nearly 40 miles more with preliminary surveys made, Derr states, and while a portion of this mileage may be electrified in the near future, a great part will not be.

Several delegations from Fairfax County will attend a public hearing this afternoon in Fredericksburg, Va., relative to allocations for the local highways recently announced by the State highway department.

The delegations will urge officials of the State highway department to make larger allocations for road work in Fairfax County because its roads are some of the heaviest traveled in the State.

The hearing today is on tentative allocations of State and Federal funds for construction work on the primary and secondary State highway systems for the next fiscal year. A large portion of the funds is from the Federal emergency relief appropriation.

The tentative allocations for Culpeper district, in which Fairfax County is located, total $1,245,522. Of this amount the relief funds have been distributed as follows: $90,270 for primary systems; $108,709 for the secondary system; $113,200 for county systems and $101,303 for the municipalities. In addition to these funds the district will receive $532,040 from the regular Federal road aid fund and $300,000 for convict road camps.

Fairfax County will receive $30,000 for the construction of a bridge over Difficult Run on the Alexandria-Leesburg pike and $1,130 to widen a bridge over Pimmett Run on the same road. An allocation of $9,362 has been made for construction in the secondary road system of the county.

The town of Falls Church has been allocated $4,150 for street work and $150,000 has been allocated out of the regular Federal aid funds for the work on the Lee boulevard in Arlington County.

Partial Text of Committee Report on Wealth Tax Bill

Following is a partial text of majority Ways and Means Committee report filed with the House yesterday by Chairman Robert L. Doughton:

The Committee on Ways and Means, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 8974) to provide revenue, equalize taxation, and for other purposes, report it back to the House without amendment and recommend that the bill do pass * * *

The bill as reported consists of four titles. Title I contains certain amendments to the revenue act of 1934 and provides for higher surtaxes on surtax net incomes in excess of $50,000; for a graduated income tax on corporations in lieu of the present uniform rate; and for a graduated excess-profits tax on corporations in lieu of the present excess-profits tax of 5 per cent. Title II proposes an inheritance tax in addition to the existing taxes. Title III proposes a gift tax on donees in addition to the existing gift tax on donors. Title IV contains certain general provisions. It is hoped that the enactment of these titles into law will remedy some of the defects of our present tax system, will provide substantial revenue, and will carry out the major policies recommended by the President in his message. It is believed that in a full year of operation, under present improving business conditions, the annual additional revenue which will be secured from the enactment of the bill will be as follows:

Source of Revenue and Estimated Additional Revenue.

Increased surtaxes	$45,000,000
Graduated corporation tax	15,000,000
Excess-profits tax	100,000,000
Inheritance tax	86,000,000
Gift tax	24,000,000
Total	$270,000,000

If business improves further, the provisions in this bill may ultimately bring in as much as 350 to 450 millions of dollars in additional revenue annually.

The proposals contained in the bill will now be described separately.

Section 101 of title I of the bill provides for increased surtax rates in the case of surtax net incomes in excess of $50,000. The surtax rates on surtax net incomes up to $50,000 remain unchanged. * * *

It is to be kept in mind, of course, that in addition to the surtax there is a normal tax of 4 per cent on the net income of an individual, in excess of certain credits. These credits are the personal exemption, the credit for dependents, earned income credit, credit for dividends and credit for interest exempt from normal tax. The bill proposes no change in this normal tax. * * * For example, an individual with a surtax net income of $100,000 will pay $2,000 more tax under the proposed rates than under existing law, while an individual with a surtax net income of $1,000,000 will pay $108,000 more tax.

It will be noted that in the proposed schedule of rates the graduation is extended to surtax net incomes up to $5,000,000, whereas under present law graduation ceases at $1,000,000. This corrects the defect in this respect pointed out by the President in his message. * * *

Under present conditions less than 4,000,000 returns are filed annually by individuals, of which less than 2,000,000 are taxable returns. * * *

The proposed surtax increases will affect only two-tenths of 1 per cent of the number of returns filed, and four-tenths of 1 per cent of the number of taxable returns filed. It should be noted that the larger increases in surtax occur in the case of surtax net incomes in excess of $1,000,000. In 1933 there there were only 46 individuals with net incomes in excess of the last-named amount. Since there was only one individual in 1933 who had a net income in excess of $5,000,000, it did not appear necessary to your committee to graduate the tax beyond the $5,000,000 point.

An income of $50,000 per annum, if from investments at 5 per cent, represents a capital of $1,000,000. Your committee is of the opinion that the surtax rates proposed, starting at $50,000 and graduated to $5,000,000, carry out the general policy expressed in the President's message.

Graduated Tax on Corporations.

The President recommended the substitution of a graduated income tax on corporations in lieu of the present income tax imposed at a uniform rate. This is a new principle which has never been used in this country and therefore your committee, in Section 102 (a) of the bill, is recommending only a very moderate graduation.

Under existing law corporations pay a flat tax of 13¾ per cent on the entire amount of their net income. No relief given to a corporation, no matter how small its net income may be.

Your committee is recommending the substitution of the following graduated tax on corporations in lieu of the present uniform rate of tax: 13¼ per cent on the first $15,000 of the net income and 14¼ per cent on the remainder.

The effect of these graduated rates will be that corporations with net incomes up to $30,00 will pay less tax than at present, comes in excess of this amount will pay slightly more tax. While no statistics are available to show the exact effect of these rates, statistics are available to show the effect on corporations having more or less than $25,000 net income. In 1932, 82,646 corporations reported taxable net incomes. Out of this number, 76,216 showed taxable net incomes of less than $25,000, and 6,430 corporations showed net incomes in excess of $25,000. Therefore, it is obvious that less than 8 per cent of uor corporations having taxable net incomes under present conditions will pay an added tax through the imposition of the graduated rate schedule. On the other hand, more than 92 per cent of our corporations having taxable net incomes will find their taxes somewhat reduced by the operation of this schedule. It is equally obvious that if statistics were available at the dividing line of $30,000, they would show that the rates are reduced would be substantially more than 92 per cent.

In spite of the small amount of graduation and in spite of the slight increase of the tax burden on the corporations with large net incomes, considerable revenue is derived from this graduated tax. This is because of the fact that, while less than 8 per cent of the corporations report net incomes in excess of $25,000, nevertheless this same 8 per cent of the corporatoins have over 90 per cent of the taxable net income. For example, in 1932, corporatons reporting less than $25,000 of net—income reported a total net income of about $205,000,000, while corporations with net incomes in excess of $25,000 reported net income of $1,947,000,000.

Section 102 (b) provides for the rate of tax in the case of railroads filing consolidated returns. Under the revenue act of 1934, only railroads may file consolidated returns and then only under certain conditions. If permitted to file such returns, and if they do so, they pay under existing law a rate of 15¾ per cent instead of 13¾ per cent. Your committee is of the opinion that it is unnecessary to provide for a graduated corporation tax on railroads if they file a consolidated return, and therefore it is recommended that, if the railroads file a consolidated return, they be required to pay a flat tax of 15¾ per cent on their entire net income. Of course, if they do not file the consolidated return, then they will be subject to the graduated rates of 13¼ and 14¼ per cent. It will be noted that the rate required on the consolidated return of 15¾ per cent is still substantially above the maximum rate of 14¼ per cent required to be paid by corporations not filing consolidated returns. The bill makes no change in the present law as to the exercise of the privilege of filing consolidated returns.

Sections 103 and 104 of the bill provide new rates of tax on life-insurance companies and on insurance companies other than life or mutual. The effect of the proposed amendments is to require these insurance companies to pay under the graduated schedule of rates instead of under the flat rate of 13¾ per cent which is at present applicable to them.

The President suggested that it might be well to consider imposing a small tax on intercorporate dividends in order to prevent the evasion of the graduated tax by means of a multiplicity of corporations. In view of the moderate graduation provided for in this bill, your committee does not believe that such a tax is necessary to prevent evasion, but it proposes at a later date to consider the proposition on its merits in connection with discouraging chains of holding companies.

Excess-Profits Tax.

Section 105 of title I of the bill proposes a revision of our existing excess-profits tax by substituting graduated rates for a uniform 5-per cent rate. This tax was not specifically mentioned by the President, but your committee feels that it is in line with his general policy to tax those with ability to pay whether they be individuals or corporations. Moreover, a large amount of revenue may be equitably obtained from the imposition of such a tax.

The excess-profits tax is based on the ratio of the net income of the corporation to the adjusted declared value of its capital stock, as provided for under section 701 of the revenue act of 1934.

The adjusted declared value of the capital stock of a corporation has already been provided for under the revenue act of 1934. In the first instance, the corporation was permitted to declare any value for its stock which it saw fit. Having declared such a value on its capital stock, the value may be increased or diminished only on account of bona-fide additions to or subtractions from its capital. The present combination capital-stock and excess-profits tax was first imposed by the national industrial recovery act of 1933. The taxes were reimposed by the revenue act of 1934 and a new declared value allowed. Your committee does not provide in this bill for another original declared value, being of the opinion that, since the corporations have already had two opportunities to set a proper value on their capital stock, it would be unnecessary from an equitable standpoint to provide another original declaration.

The excess-profits tax is a sound tax and it is believed that in future years it will be productive of very considerable revenue. The excess-profits and war-profits taxes imposed during the war period were similar in character.

* * * *

Your committee believes that the proposed excess-profits tax at the moderate rates suggested will in each full year of operation under improving business conditions bring in about $100,000,000 of additional revenue.

Effective Date of Amendments.

Section 106 of title I of the bill sets forth the taxable years which will first be affected by all the amendments made in this title.

The increased surtax rates will apply only to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1935. In other words the increase in taxes is entirely prospective and no 1935 income will be subject to the increased rates.

In the case of the graduated corporation tax, a similar policy is pursued and no 1935 income will be subject to tax at the new rates.

In the case of the excess-profits tax, this will apply to income-tax taxable years ending after June 30, 1936. The great majority of corporations file on the calendar-year basis, and in this case they will pay the new graduated excess-profits tax only on their calendar-year 1936 profits. In the case of fiscal years ending on or after July 31, 1936, and on or before November 30, 1936, it is possible that the new rates will apply to that portion of the 1935 income accruing after July 31.

Inheritance Tax.

Title II of the bill provides for an inheritance tax in addition to existing Federal estate taxes. The inheritance tax is imposed upon the net value of the beneficial interests transferred by reason of the death of a decedent dying after the bill is enacted into law to each beneficiary. * * *

The property subject to the inheritance tax is, in general, the same as that which is subject to the existing estate taxes. However, dower and curtesy interests, estates in lieu thereof, or an equivalent amount of property elected by the surviving spouse after death in lieu of such interests are not subject to the inheritance tax.

The inheritance tax is imposed with respect to all property received from a citizen or resident decedent, except real property located abroad. If the beneficiary inherits the property from a nonresident decedent, the transfer is taxable only if the property is situated within the United States. The bill exempts from the tax transfers to certain charitable or other organizations, as well as transfers to or for the use of the United States or the States for exclusively public purposes.

The value of the beneficial interests transferred to each beneficiary is determined as of the date of the decedent's death. To prevent any undue hardship arising from a decline in value after the date of death, a special deduction is allowed for net shrinkage, based upon the difference betwen the value of assets on the date of death and one year thereafter (or the date of sale or exchange in the case of assets sold or exchanged during such period).

Your committee has given recognition to the principle of consanguinity by allowing as a deduction the following exemptions: (1) $50,000 in the case of an inheritance passing to a surviving spouse, child (including a child legally adopted before it attained the age of 21), father, mother, brother, or sister (including a brother or sister of the half-blood), grandchild, grandfather, or grandmother; and (2) $10,000 in the case of an inheritance passing to any other person. * * *

The administrative provisions of the bill in general follow those which are now applied to the estate and gift taxes imposed under existing law.

To prevent avoidance of the inheritance tax through the use of corporations, a special rate is provided for in case the corporation is formed or availed of for the purpose of avoiding the tax or any part thereof. The burden of proving that the corporation was formed or availed of for that purpose is upon the commissioner, except that, if 50 per cent or more of the interest or control of the corporation exists in any one or more persons bearing the relationship to the decedent of spouse, child, father, mother, brother or sister, grandchild, grandfather or grandmother, then the burden of proof is upon the corporation to show that it was not formed or availed of for the purpose of avoiding the inheritance tax.

Title III of the bill imposes a gift tax upon the right to receive property by gift. This is a companion tax to the inheritance tax and is designed to prevent avoidance of that tax by taxing gifts made during lifetime.

Unlike the present gift tax, which is imposed upon all gifts made by the donor to all donees, the gift tax on donees is imposed separately with respect to gifts made by each donor to each donee. Like the present gift tax, the gift tax on donees is levied with respect to all gifts made after the enactment of the act, but for a more effective administration and to secure prompt collection of the revenues, the tax is computed and collected annually, beginning with the calendar year 1935. Gifts made prior to the effective date of the act are not subject to tax.

The computation of the tax payable each year involves three operations, namely; (1) a computation of the tax at graduated rates on all gifts (with certain express exceptions) made after the enactment of the act, including gifts made in the current calendar year; (2) a computation of the tax at graduated rates on the gifts made in the prior year or years; and (3) the substraction of the result of the second computation from that of the first. This computation results in a tax imposed on a cumulative basis. In short, the design is to impose a tax which measurably approaches the inheritance tax which would have been payable if the donee had received the property by inheritance.

The principle of consanguinity, which is recognized in thei nheritance tax, is also reflected in the donee's gift tax. An exemption is allowed on net gifts of $50,000 in the case of a spouse, child (including a child legally adopted before it attains the age of 21), father, mother, brother, or sister (including a brother or sister of the half-blood), grand child, grandfather, or grandmother. In the case of all other donees a specific exemption of $10,000 is allowed. These exemptions are not annual exemptions and must be used as rapidly as possible.

Gifts of the first $5,000 made to any donee by any donor during the calendar year (other than of future interests in property) are exempt from the gift tax on donees. A similar exemption is contained in the existing gift tax on donors.

The bill exemepts from the tax gifts to certain charitable or other organizations, as well as gifts to or for the use of the United States or States for exclusively public purposes.

* * * *

To prevent avoidance of the tax by the use of corporations, similar special provisions are made as in the case of the inheritance tax described earlier in this report.

House Debate On Wealth Tax Cut to 6 Hours

Sargent, secretary of the National Association of Manufacturers and representative of eight other business organizations; H. Boardman Spalding, of the National Association of Manufacturers' taxation committee, and M. L. Seidman, of the New York Board of Trade.

Business witnesses took the Finance Committee stand in the absence of Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, who postponed his appearance before the committee for 24 hours. Another witness, yet to be heard from, is Newton D. Baker, former Democratic Secretary of War, who planned to ask for the charity gift exemption voted yesterday by Ways and Means Democrats.

Embodying the essence of the George-McCormack bill, permitting corporations to exempt up to 5 per cent of income donated to charity, the exemption amendment was adopted by a 10-to-5 vote of majority members. Community chests and charitable organizations had united in pressing for the amendment, contending they would lose $20,000,000 a year without it.

Allen Burns, representing Community Chests and councils, estimated yesterday that 25 per cent of private charity funds are contributed by corporations. He said if the President's stand was adhered to it would "wreck" a "proven plan of voluntary and co-operative financing."

"And while further discouragement to the flow of corporation giving would wreck private social work, we do not exaggerate when we say that community chests never have been the rich man's child," he added.

The President at a recent press conference had argued that corporate gifts to charity were primarily for the purpose of building up good will. He took the position that investors in the corporation should receive the profits distributed in the form of charity gifts.

Pressure Evident.

Meanwhile, at the Capitol, pressure of leaders for a late August adjournment was evident in the manner in which the tax bill was groomed for a speedy trip through both houses. Shortly after the majority tax bill report was filed in the House, Senate Leader Robinson remarked that, with good luck, Congress might yet adjourn by August 20.

Majority Report Filed.

The majority report filed by Doughton contained little of information or comment other than a resume of the bill's provisions already made public, and a $270,000,000 estimate of probable yield.

"If business improves further," the report commented, "the provisions in this bill may ultimately bring in as much as $350,000,000 to $450,000,000 in additional revenue annually."

Hope was expressed that the bill's enactment "will remedy some of the defects of our present tax system, will provide substantial revenue, and will carry out the major policies recommended by the President in his message.

Despite open procedure on the tax bill approved yesterday by the House Rules Committee, leaders felt confident that an overwhelming Democratic majority will preserve the measure against most modifying and liberalizing amendments. House liberals nevertheless were organizing to begin the surtax step-up at $5,000, instead of $50,000.

As the Senate Finance Committee continued open hearings on the measure, Chairman Pat Harrison instructed committee experts to prepare an amendment which would offer inducements to holding companies to liquidate, through an exemption from stock-transfer taxes to holding companies availing themselves of the provision. The amendment would apply whether or not the "death sentence" for "unnecessary" holding companies is retained in the utility holding company bill, according to Harrison.

Spalding Assails Theory.

Spalding, vice president of the athletic goods firm of A. G. Spalding & Bro., appearing before the Finance Committee yesterday, addressed himself particularly to proposed corporation taxes, and asserted it is a "false notion" that some classes can be taxed without limit and without damage to business.

Spalding opposed going back to the use of "invested capital" as the base for the proposed excess profits tax, and opposed the latter levy as "unfair" and an impediment to the growth of small corporations.

Pointing out that corporations had to "guess" at "declared value" figures used as a base for the capital stock tax, and now proposed as an excess profits tax base, he said.

"This law is an enormous lottery in which the players are the Government on one side and the corporate management on the other, playing with the assets of millions of stockholders.

"Of course the element of chance is inherent in all business enterprises. So far as it is natural economic chance it is the essence of the 'profit and loss' system. But to artificially increase that chance on the basis of 'heads' you pay me, but 'tails' you receive nothing, hardly seems in the public interest."

He said the excess profits tax proposal is "highly discriminatory between different companies, depending upon the relative stability of their annual profits and their luck with respect to the 'guess' made by their management."

Spalding said the tax must inevitably operate in "the most capricious and unfair manner" between different businesses.

Sargent appeared before the committee in opposition to what he termed "unsound" tax features in the graduated corporation income tax and excess profits levies contained in the House bill.

"We naturally favor restoration of a balanced budget, and believe every possible effort should be made to accomplish this by reducing Government costs to fit reasonable taxes," he said. "We believe that Congress should avoid enactment of tax laws which embody unsound principles."

Sargent argued that the burden of a graduated corporation income tax or excess profits tax must be borne by the stockholders, and can not be shifted to the consumers.

Discrimination Charged.

He said the proposed graded levy on corporate income "is discriminatory, that it violates the principle of ability to pay, and that in many cases it would be regressive instead of progressive."

He cited a statement by Senator William G. McAdoo, of California, while Secretary of the Treasury, to the effect that an excess profits tax rests upon a "wholly indefensible notion."

Seidman, speaking for the New York Board of Trade, urged "the need for broadening our tax base," asserting that "in no other way can we hope to ultimately bring our finances into a normal balance."

The President's tax message, he termed "a complete and unqualified endorsement of the use of taxation for non-fiscal purposes."

"The message quite apparently is not a fiscal document, but a statement of social and economic philosophy with regard to taxation," he said.

On the basis of proposed inheritance and gift tax yields, he said it would take about 275 years to retire the national debt, adding "but then, since the sum only represents about 13½ per cent of the interest required to carry the debt, the significance of this item as a national debt reducer need not further be commented upon."

He asked the question if the result, on the face of it, "isn't well nigh conclusive of the impossibility of expecting the taxation of so-called wealth alone to solve our fiscal difficulties?"

Tax Proposals.

Coupled with increased taxation, Seidman said the dual system of budgeting should be eliminated, and the Administration should determine to "apply the brakes" to the spending of Government money.

Seidman proposed "a wider income base than has yet been applied in this country."

He put forward the following tax proposals:

That the normal tax credit for dependents, and exemptions for single persons, be held at the same level, but exemptions for married persons be reduced from $2,500 to $1,500.

That the surtax apply at a 10 per cent rate to incomes of $4,000 in excess of exemptions and credits, graduating upward to 75 per cent on incomes above $1,000,000.

That estate taxes be increased in lieu of inheritance tax step-ups, but if inheritance taxes are insisted upon, a small exemption of possibly $10,000 be provided, and taxes be imposed ranging from 1 per cent on the first $90,000 above exemption to a maximum of 10 per cent on inheritances above $900,000.

That instead of imposing a tax on "bigness" as such, every corporation having an income of less than $25,000 be given a $2,000 exemption, and that the present flat 13¾ rate be increased to 14½ per cent on all corporations, or even to 15 per cent if necessary.

Library Employe Ends His Life Here

Herbert G. Jackson Uses Both Gas and Gun.

Herbert G. Jackson, for 30 years employed in the copyright division of the Library of Congress, was found dead in the kitchen of his home at 57 North Washington street, Clarendon, Va., by his wife and daughter. He had inhaled illuminating gas and shot himself through the stomach. Coroner W. C. Welburn issued a certificate of death by suicide.

Jackson, who had been ill for two years, had recently applied for retirement because of disability. This morning his wife, Mrs. Nora Irene Jackson, discovered a note addressed to Dr. Ruth Jackson, his daughter. The two found Jackson dead in the kitchen. He had placed a tube in his mouth and secured it with a string around his neck.

Born in Prince Georges County, Jackson had lived most of his life in Washington, moving to Clarendon about a year ago. He was 57 years old.

Mine Shaft Blocked, Rescue Feared Impossible.

By the United Press.

Cape Town, July 31.—Three Europeans and 75 natives were feared dead tonight after an explosion wrecked the Marsfield colliery near Breyton. All hope of rescuing the entombed miners was abandoned tonight.

Relief workers struggling through tons of debris found the bottom of the 500-foot mine shaft blocked.

Fire did not follow the explosion, origin of which was not determined, but carbon monoxide gas was believed to have made survival impossible.

The 77 workers trapped by the explosion have been entombed for many hours. Rescue work was ordered throughout the night, but it was feared none would be brought alive to the surface.

Georgetown U. Appointments Are Announced

Two Vacancies Filled, Five Transferred; Others to Come Here.

Two positions on the Georgetown University faculty formerly held by the Rev. Arthur A. O'Leary, S. J., and vacated when he was made president of the university last month, were filed yesterday.

The new appointees are the Rev. Leo F. Andries, S. J., of New York City, who was named librarian, and the Rev. Stephen F. McNamee, S. J., of Woodstock College, who will become professor of ethics. One other position formerly held by President O'Leary, that of chairman of the faculty of philosophy, remains unfilled.

Orders received from New York headquarters of the Jesuit Society yesterday named five new professors and ordered the transfer of an equal number of teachers from the college faculty. The Rev. Laurence C. Gorman, S. J., head of the chemistry department, was granted a leave of absence for one year to pursue studies at St. Andrew-on-the-Hudson, Poughkeepsie, N. Y. It was not announced who would take his place.

Father Andries, the newly named librarian, has been stationed at St. Ignatius School and parish in New York City, where the Rev. Dr. Coleman Nevils, S. J., former president of Georgetown, is now stationed. For many years he had been headmaster of the Xavier High School in New York. Father McNamee formerly was professor of ethics at Woodstock College in Maryland and made special studies at the Gregorian University in Rome.

The new appointees included the Rev. Louis E. McKay, S. J., as professor of classical languages. He also comes from the Xavier High School in New York. Prof. William C. Bier and Prof. Joseph G. Dwyer, Jesuit scholastics, were added to the faculty. The former will be assistant instructor in philosophy. He is from Woodstock College. Mr. Dwyer, who will be assistant professor of classical languages, also comes from Woodstock.

In addition to Father Gorman, the four present members of the faculty ordered transferred are Prof. George A. Yanitelli, assistant professor of classical languages; Prof. A. A. Hufnagle, Prof. L. C. McHugh and Prof. A. A. Beckwith, all Jesuit scholastics.

Mr. Yanitelli will go to complete his studies in theology at Woodstock College. Mr. Hufnagle has been appointed an instructor in chemistry at Gonzaga High School in Washington; Mr. McHugh will teach mathematics at St. Joseph's College, Philadelphia, and Mr. Beckwith will teach English at the Brooklyn (N. Y.) Preparatory School.

Mary Boland to Fight Alienation Complaint

Los Angeles, July 31 (AP).—Mary Boland, describing a $150,000 alienation of affections suit brought against her as "a masterpiece of ingratitude," said today "I will fight it to the last ditch."

The screen actress was sued by Mrs. Elizabeth Ross Kummer, wife of Miss Boland's nephew, George Bernard Kummer.

Mrs. Kummer charged Miss Boland with interfering in the Kummers' domestic affairs with the result they became estranged. She also charged the actress was dictatorial and desired to be the "ruler of the roost."

32 Firemen Hurt.

Detroit, July 31 (AP).—Thirty-two firemen were injured in an explosion at Detroit training headquarters late this afternoon. The explosion occurred while new apparatus was being demonstrated for members of the Michigan Firemen's Association, in convention here. Witnesses said a quantity of gasoline had been placed in a pan in the room for the demonstration of a carbon dioxide extinguisher. For an unknown reason, the gasoline exploded.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go.

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Your whole system is poisoned and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

Laxatives are only makeshifts. A mere bowel movement doesn't get at the cause. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless, gentle, yet amazing in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c.

Chums Attend Rites for Girl Killed in Crash

Crowd's Gayety Stilled, Boys Bear Coffin of Virginia Donnelly.

Surrounded by grief-stricken chums and schoolmates, 15-year-old Virginia Donnelly, Washington's first traffic victim since police began a safety drive 14 days ago, was buried yesterday morning in Glenwood Cemetery.

Funeral services were held at the S. H. Hines funeral home, where the chapel was packed with friends of the dead girl's family, as well as with her own young friends. Usually that crowd is full of gayety and laughter. But yesterday youths quietly wiped their eyes and sobs from 30 or more girls were mingled with the words of the Protestant Episcopal burial service, pronounced by the Rev. James F. Madison, of St. John's Church. Virginia attended Sunday School at St. John's.

Most of the young people at the funeral were her classmates at Powell Junior High School, from which she was graduated last June. The girls served as flower bearers, the boys as pallbearers. In the group were several boys who belong to a motorcycle club and with whom Virginia sometimes rode. She was on a motorcycle with a youth when she was killed early last Sunday in a collision with an automobile at Queens Chapel and Bladensburg roads.

Besides her parents, Preston Donnelly and Mrs. Elizabeth Baker, Virginia is survived by her grandmother, Mrs. Clara D. McCarter. She made her home with her father and grandmother at 1855 Wyoming avenue northwest.

Court Backs Coughlin On Use of Stadium

Chicago, July 31 (AP).—Superior Judge James J. Kelly today signed a mandamus order commanding the Chicago park board to grant a permit to the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, Detroit radio priest, for a mass meeting in Soldier Field Stadium on August 21.

Judge Kelly indicated, however, he would grant an appeal immediately to the park board.

Father Coughlin sued for a writ of mandamus after the park board refused three applications for use of the stadium, holding that for him to speak would be contrary to its policy on the ground he would disseminate political and economic propaganda of a controversial nature.

Court Rejects Howard U. Suit By Contractors

Holds Builders Can't Claim Protection Afforded on Federal Projects.

The United States Court of Appeals, in an opinion written by Associate Justice D. Lawrence Groner, yesterday held that contractors doing work on Howard University were not entitled to the protection accorded contractors on Government projects. The opinion held Howard University is a private corporation, even though it is sustained by a Federal appropriation approximating $900,000 a year.

The ruling was made in a suit brought by firms claiming they had supplied labor and materials for the erection of a dormitory for women students, costing $190,000. R. Bland Phelps, trading as the R. B. Phelps Stone Co., Barber & Ross and others sued the surety company that underwrote the contractor's bid for an alleged deficit between their charges and what they were paid. The District Supreme Court ruled they were entitled to collect on the surety bond because of the failure of the contractor to pay them in full, but this, the Appellate Court said, was wrong.

The money for the building was appropriated by Congress, and was to be expended under the supervision of the Government. This gave the Government no title to the land or the building, and did not disturb the university's title to the property. Under these circumstances, it was held, the subcontractors could not collect on a bond that was given to cover only contractors working on Federal projects.

The Hurd act, under which suit was brought, provides that firms working on Government jobs shall give bond to guarantee payment of all construction costs.

Convicted Utility Men Denied Clemency Pleas

Minneapolis, July 31 (AP).—W. B. Foshay and H. H. Henley, former heads of the defunct Public Utilities Consolidated Corporation, now serving 15-year sentences in Leavenworth Penitentiary for using the mails to defraud, were refused applications for executive clemency by President Roosevelt late Monday, it was disclosed today.

Foshay and Henley were convicted on mail-fraud charges growing out of the collapse of the Foshay utility companies in 1929.

"Extra miles in every tankful"
says...THE ENGINEER IN EVERY GALLON

Both Tydol and Tydol-Ethyl Gasolines contain top-cylinder oil

EVEN the best motor doesn't produce its capacity mileage unless it gets proper upper-cylinder lubrication. Oil-thirsty valves stick. Pistons are slowed up by friction-drag. Upper-cylinder walls become overheated. The whole motor works harder and delivers less power and mileage than it is capable of producing.

That's why there is blended in Tydol Gasoline a special top-cylinder lubricant which is also a carbon-solvent (the "Engineer in Every Gallon").

This lubricant is carried by the gasoline itself to the tops of the cylinders and soon has valves, upper-cylinder walls and pistons cool and smooth-working as a clock.

Tydol gives you extra power, smoothness and mileage... yet costs no more than ordinary gasolines.

Marjorie Glasgow Bride of A. C. Congreve, Lord Bessborough's Nephew.

Royalty Is Among 500 Notables at Brilliant Social Event.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

Capital society, which is most cosmopolitan, is always interested in international marriages, and when one of the parties is a Washingtonian, even a former resident here, interest mounts high and all details are welcomed.

More than 500 distinguished guests attended an Anglo-American wedding Tuesday in the old Church of St. Clement Danes, in London, when Miss Marjorie Glasgow, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Glasgow, of London, formerly of Washington, became the bride of Mr. Ambrose Christian Congreve, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Congreve, of Waterford, Ireland.

The bride's father is a noted engineer, formerly of Buchanan, Va., Washington and New York, and now living in London. The bridegroom is a nephew of Lord Bessborough, retiring Governor General of Canada.

Brilliant Social Event.

The wedding was a brilliant social event, among the guests being the Princess Marie Louise, cousin of King George; the United States Ambassador to the Court of St. James, Mrs. Robert Worth Bingham; the Belgian Ambassador and Baroness de Cartier de Marchienes; the Duchess of Hemilton, the Duke of St. Albans, and the Argentine Ambassador and Senora de Malbran, the former one-time envoy to Washington.

The bride was given in marriage by her father and wore a gown of heavy ivory satin with close-fitting bodice. The sleeves were very full at the shoulders, tapering to the wrists, and a three-yard train of the satin fell from the waistline.

She wore a headdress of coiled ivory satin with a veil of old lace that belonged to her mother.

The bride's mother is the former Miss Margaret Branch, a member of the well-known Branch family of Virginia. Mrs. Congreve is a niece of Ellen Glasgow, the novelist.

Visited in Capital.

The Glasgows visited in Washington several years ago when they were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Wilkins. When the bride was a small girl they occupied the house at the corner of Seventeenth street and Rhode Island avenue, once the French Embassy. They have made a distinct place for themselves in London society. Their home, Moncorvo House, Ennismore Gardens, near Hyde Park, is one of the handsomest and their guest lists are usually found to include members of the royal family.

The bride's engagement to the present Earl of Dondonald was announced last year. The earl, then Lord Cochrane, succeeded to the title upon the death of his father, the twelfth Earl of Dundonald. Considerably older than his fiancee, the wedding was scheduled for last September, delayed until October and finally postponed indefinitely.

WHAT TODAY MEANS

"Leo."

IF AUGUST 1 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10:30 a. m. to 12:30 p. m., from 2:30 to 4:30 p. m. and from 8:30 to 10:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 8:30 to 10:30 a. m., from 4:30 to 6:30 p. m. and from 10:30 until midnight.

Avoid being too self-confident this day, as by carelessly disregarding some safe measure you may make a mistake. Taking the day as a whole, however, there is every indication that in many respects it will be very favorable for you. Your worldly assets are likely to be substantially increased. In some manner you probably will see much love displayed, either through gifts or letters.

Business men probably will have reasons for feeling optimistic, and may give ample evidenece of this through liberal spending. Social get-together parties will prove a successful medium for producing the spirit of good-fellowship, and may be productive of a feeling of better understanding between friends where strained relationship has existed. It will pay to be in a receptive frame of mind if amicable overtures are made to you.

Married and engaged couples, and those in a sentimental mood, should not depend too much on their own powers to make the evening entertaining, but will display wisdom if they seek some form of entertainment outside of their own home.

If a woman and August 1 is your birthday, by lacking a certain amount of spontaneous enthusiasm, you run the chance of causing people to think you are inclined to be indifferent. It will pay you to display animated interest both in people, and things calling for expressions of admiration. Exceptionally good luck, likely will come to you in an unexpected manner. Women born on this date should find early marriage very advantageous. Music, acting, writing, sculpturing and selling may offer you a successful career.

The child born on August 1 usually, when it reaches its teens, forms decided opinions of its own, which it might be a mistake to try to change.

If a man and August 1 is your natal day, you should take a certain amount of physical exercise to keep yourself in good condition. It is advisable for you to take an interest in social activities. You have a forceful personality, which, if properly used, probably will enable you to do some big things. Mining, mechanical engineering, law, medicine, inventing, manufacturing, educational and literary work are among the activities through which you might meet with the greatest financial success.

Successful people born on August 1:

Henry D. Rogers, geologist.

Maria Mitchell, astronomer.

Peter B. Wight, architect.

Richard Henry Dana, jurist and author.

Walter L. Palmer, artist.

Skirts for Winter Moving Kneeward

By the United Press.

PARIS, July 30.—The season's first winter style showing at Chanel's today proved skirts are moving kneeward.

The famous designer's latest creations raised skirts 3 inches higher. Floor-length evening skirts were caught up occasionally almost knee-high in front and slit sides revealed legs through flimsy underskirts in other creations.

The knee-conscious styles went for the brightest colers—burgundy, red, crimson, bright green, rust, warm brown and slate gray. Beautiful mannikins parading for buyers and fashion writers showed Chanel is using shaggy wool and waffle weave for sports dresses, tulle-stitched with tinsel for evenings and velvets strewn with scintillating dots for afternoons and evenings.

New Mixture For Ice Cream Is Rich, Tasty

Fruit-Sirup Solution Sells for Only 15 Cents; No Churning Required.

By Dudley Harmon.

Pinch-Hitting for Ruth Anne Davis.

THE OTHER DAY our attention was attracted by a swarm of people gathered around a counter in a downtown department store. Dashing over, afire with curiosity to see what was going on, we found that the group was engaged in sampling ice cream. Since this seemed a pleasant occupation for a hot summed afternoon, we also asked for some, and fell to.

We don't know whether it was just because it was such a hot day, but it turned out to be absolutely the best ice cream we ever tasted. Rich, smooth, creamy, and delicately flavored, it resembled those expensive French creams one usually finds only in the snootiest confectionery shops. Our curiosity further aroused, we asked some questions of the young lady in charge, and discovered the following interesting facts:

In the first place, this ice cream is easy to make. A wholesome, healthful mixture of pure sirups and fruit juices, this solution can be mixed with a can of milk and a half pint of whipped cream. Then it is placed in the icebox for an hour or so, after which it is ready to serve. The unusual feature about this ice cream is that it is guaranteed not to turn flaky or icy, as so many similar preparations do. It comes in all imaginable flavors, even in sherbet form, and costs only 15 cents a can. One can is sufficient for six people.

Housewives who use this mixture can wave good-by to clumsy churns and mixers. It will mean no further fussing with ice sacks or salt, or any of the other complicated ingredients of home-made ice cream. And it's so good that your family will want more and more.

WHERE to buy cosmetics in this column? A new leaflet by Ruth Anne Davis gives the names of the shops. Address her in care of The Post, inclosing a 2-cent stamp.

To "Pick Up" Your Face.

IN another department, this same store has a grand face cream, which, very appropriately, is called a "pick-up" cream. Picking up is exactly what it does for your face. It's made of a vegetable oil which freshens and revitalizes for the time being. You leave it on five minutes or so, and it works wonders in bringing back to normal those sagging muscles and enlarged pores. Tired wrinkles gradually will be softened after several applications. In fact, the whole effect will be one of rejuvenation. It's a delightful pistachio green in color, and has a fragrant scent. It costs $2.50 for a large-sized jar.

This cream has the advantages of a clay pack treatment without the harmful effect which clay so often has on the skin. Both draw out all impurities. Clay, however, sometimes leaves the skin very dry, while this cream makes it soft and satin smooth. Also, make-up can be applied immediately after use, whereas after a clay pack one usually has to wait for an hour or so.

For Coaster Dodgers.

WORRIED hostesses whose guests have a trick of always missing the coaster when they set their drink down upon a pet mahogany table will be interested in the new coasters which an F street store is featuring. With these new gadgets, guests can not be coaster dodgers, for the coasters are attached securely to the stem of the glass by means of an insertion in the middle. They're made of a rubber composition, which allows for elasticity and easy adjustment. They won't come off, and are light enough not to be cumbersome. You simply slip them around the stem of your glass, and then forget all about them. And they'll not scratch your table, either, the way even the most expensive coasters so often do. Washing them is very easy indeed. One gives them a flick or two with a damp cloth, and they are as good as new again. They come in several different colors and are packed 12 in a box. Nosegays painted around the edges make them very attractive. They cost only $1 the box.

Attractive Glasses.

WHILE we're on the subject of drinking, we must mention the stunning set of glasses on sale in a downtown department store. Made in Italy, they're exact copies of those used in the smart bar on the Italian liner, the Rex. Crystal clear, with a red glass base, they're of striking appearance. Their heavy base is a guarantee that they will not tip over easily. They come in different shapes and sizes, for liqueurs, highballs, old-fashioned, cocktails and champagne. The liqueur glasses cost only 25 cents apiece. The ones for cocktails are 50 cents, and the others are a dollar.

Call Dudley Harmon, of The Washington Post, National 4200, Extension 323, for further information, or write, inclosing stamped, addressed envelope.

Mrs. Ickes Packs Navajo Jewelry Box For Customary Trip to New Mexico

Mrs. Harold L. Ickes, who will leave soon to resume her archeological studies in New Mexico, is shown above with Frank Allen, driver on her expeditions. Her base of operations will be her home at Coolidge, in the heart of the Navajo tribes.

By Emma Perley Lincoln.

"LETS SEE your silver box!" is one of the first things one hears when friend meets friend in Mesa Land.

That is why Mrs. Harold L. Ickes, wife of the Secretary of the Interior and noted archeologist in her own right, can not make up her mind to leave her box of Navajo jewelry at home when she sets out for New Mexico next week to spend some time, as is her custom, in the colorful Southwest.

"I have so many things to take with me," she said regretfully, "books and papers and articles important to the trip. I really should leave this silver behind, but we have such a good time when we get together out there showing each other our collections."

"My collection is nothing compared to that of some of my friends," she said modestly, as she took out tray after tray of exquisitely wrought silver and turquoise necklaces, bracelets and rings, many of them extremely rare.

"I am intensely fond of my silver, as many of the pieces have been presented to me by my special friends among the Indians and have been worn in their families for countless generations.

Made Especially for Her.

"However, not all are old. This, for instance." She picked up a short collar of three strands of beads, with a pendant of three eagle feathers, delicately hammered from thin silver. "The Indians do not like the black velvet band I wear around my throat, so they made this for me, but, a creature of habit, I seldom wear it."

On inspection, the chains of silver beads which look so barbaric and ponderous, are found to be as light as a feather. They are made by hammering a piece of silver into a shape carved in a stone, then soldering the two halves together.

Difference Between Old, New.

Even the uninitiated can easily tell the difference between the ancient jewelry and that made by the present generation which proceeds with an eye to the tourist trade. The modern output is, if anything, a shade too perfect, the very irregularity and crudeness of the old silver being more than half its charm.

Only the initiated, however, can tell which jewelry is Navajo and which Pueblo. "The Navajos have a right to make this bead," Mrs. Ickes will say, directing your attention to a delicate design with three corrugated ridges encircling it, and, "the Pueblos have the right to make birds," showing you a tiny bird, carved out of semiprecious black stone, highly polished.

There are crude carvings, "charms" used by the medicine men in their rituals. Some are strung on thongs and still have clinging to them bits of the sacred meal, and dried blood of the sacrifices.

While living in the Navajo country Mrs. Ickes wears her usual dress and adheres to the American system of home life. She finds the stories about her New Mexico associations with the Indians greatly exaggerated.

"I have sometimes read in stories written about me," she said, "that I speak Indian fluently, or that I have been admitted to a tribe and given an Indian name. To be sure, I can't do that I resort to Spanish. I know enough Navajo words to make myself understood, and when But to say anyone speaks Indian is like saying one speaks European, there are so many and varied tribal dialects.

"As for being admitted into an Indian tribe, that is never done, and when you read anything to that effect, you can put it down to the imaginative brain of an enterprising publicity agent.

"And as for being given an Indian name that isn't done, either. They never tell you their own Indian names, and I assure you we never ask them. In fact, one of the first things to learn, in living among Indians, is to ask no questions.

"This is easy for me to adhere to, because I do not live among them for the purpose of prying into their lives, their traditions, or secrets, but because it is a central point from which to make my archeological studies, and in the years I have spent there, I have incidentally learned to know and love them as individuals, and not as picturesque oddities, which seems to be some Americans' conception of them."

Has Adobe House at Coolidge.

Mrs. Ickes will spend six weeks in New Mexico, with her own house at Coolidge, McKinley County, her base of operations. Twenty miles from Gallup, 8,000 feet above sea level, in the heart of the Navajo tribes, numbering some 26,000, she finds this the most advantageous point from which to work.

Her house is an unpretentious two-room adobe, with wide windows framing expanses of purple mountains and turquoise sky and furnished in Navajo rugs, bright pillows and chinzes. Her entrance door can be opened at the top, the lower half left closed tightly to keep out the snakes, for while sacred to the Hopis, they are still just snakes to Mrs. Ickes.

She does not keep house while there, but takes her meals at the trading post nearby. She says she likes to be free to start off at a moment's notice, with no such worries as emptying an icebox or disposing of food.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: When a woman who has been married for six years realizes with absolute finality that she no longer loves her husband, what ought she do? That's my problem. I'm 34. My husband is 42. We have no children. We have a nice home, lots of friends, plenty of money (my husband is a self-made man), but absolutely nothing else in common, except our six years of marriage.

* * * *

Looking back over our marriage, I realize we've been drifting apart for the past four years. But it was not until about six months ago that I woke up to the fact I am living with a stranger. I tried to shake off the notion, but it grows on me. There are times when I feel actually constrained and embarrassed in my husband's company.

* * * *

I think my husband's interest in his business is to blame. With him, it is a consuming passion. His home and his wife are just casual conveniences, a kind of vague backdrop to his ardent pursuit of success. I might say we are mirrors for his vanity, or window-dressing, as it were.

* * * *

I tried to talk the situation over with my husband, but he jokingly brushed the whole thing aside. He joshed me about being another one of those "misunderstood wives," suggested I take a trip somewhere, and ended up by suggesting that I either see a doctor or cultivate a hobby. He said that he loves me as much as the day he married me, and said in his opinion I am bored with myself and with my lazy leisure, and am making him the goat.

* * * *

He is convinced, in spite of all I say, that I do love him. What should I do? It would take a great deal of courage to leave him and try to shift for myself (and I certainly would neither ask for nor accept alimony, having no children); but isn't that the thing to do?

* * * *

Recently I sought the advice of a close relative of mine, who has always been my confidante. She doesn't live here. I tried to tell her the situation in a letter. She wrote back that I was acting like a silly fool. She was a bridesmaid at our wedding and remembers how much in love we (my husband and I) were at the time. She admires my husband greatly, and thinks him a great catch and me a lucky woman. What do you advise me to do?

UNLOVING.

Some Suggestions.

DEAR UNLOVING: I think your plain-spoken relative and your skeptical husband are probably right; the former in saying you are "acting like a silly fool," and the latter in believing your love for him has been temporarily lost sight of in an attack of mental dyspepsia.

What you had best do is find something more constructive to occupy your time and energies than thinking about your neglected self and the state of your emotions. What may really be wrong with you is childlessness. The powerful natural instinct to reproduce, when denied or frustrated for whatever reason, has a way of avenging itself by breaking out in all sorts of disguised emotional and nervous symptoms.

Your husband might appeal to you as more dear and indispensable if he shared parental responsibility with you. Perhaps the reason he is so engrossed in business is because you have failed to afford him, through parenthood, another creative outlet. Don't dramatize your position unduly. Don't place all the blame on your husband's shoulders if you have little in common after six years' marriage.

* * * *

If you want to play safe, you might take a trip of three or six months, to think things over. If you have more courage, you might arrange for a trial separation over the same length of time, leaving your husband's bed and board and shifting entirely for yourself during that time, to see how you like it. But with no more of a case than you make against your husband, I really think if you are wise, you'll stay right where you are and proceed to find happiness through more intelligent direction of your energies.

PICK-UP MENUS for TODAY

By Dorothea Duncan.

IF YOU are finding quick pick-up cold luncheons a little dull, remember that good old rule of one hot dish a meal. A small bowl of hot soup, just enough to be a teaser, will brighten up your appetite and give you more zest to eat than you have known since the mercury took that upward leap.

Now put the cart before the horse and try a chilly pick-me-up before a hot dinner. Hot food spiced here and there with a cold tingly dish goes so much better in warm weather than all cold food.

When you have given all the fruit juice cocktails a try and you are peering around the grocer's shelves for something different, get a bottle of prune juice. Chilled and flavored with lemon juice it makes an excellent cocktail with which to introduce an entree of calve's liver and bacon or roast veal.

Bathtubs First In List of Wants For Tenements

A bathtub is the American's most desired home comfort, a housing survey in New York has indicated.

The survey made by the Henry Street settlement revealed that a typical family of four, living in a tenement on the lower East Side, wants a bathtub in preference to a shower bath, to steam heat and to hot water in any new housing project. Only 21 preferred a shower bath to 198 who insisted on a bathtub.

The housing wants of slum dwellers were modest and reasonable, the survey showed. The major wish for a bathtub "would seem to refute the legend that working-class families use their bathtubs as a storage place for coal," the report said. "Other things needed in any new housing would be built-in cupboards, clothes closets and numerous electric outlets. Many indicated a preference for a large kitchen rather than a kitchen and dining room."

FAVORITE FOODS of FAMOUS FOLK

Senator Clark's Favorite Dish Is Hog Jowl and Mustard Greens.

By Pattie Ellicott.

IF YOU are invited to a family dinner at the home of Senator and Mrs. Bennett Champ Clark, of Missouri, ten to one, the piece de resistance will be hog jowl and mustard greens.

There's a reason for it. This has been a favorite dish in the Clark family since the days when Champ Clark, the late Speaker of the House of Representatives and father of Senator Clark, was a struggling lawyer in Pike County, Mo. After a hard day in his office, when he went home to dinner, Mrs. Clark, who learned to cook out of a cookbook after her marriage, could cheer him always if she served hog jowl and mustard greens.

Time passed and Champ Clark became famous, Speaker of the House and within striking distance of the Presidency. Still his favorite dish was hog jowl and mustard greens. Often when he attended state dinners, where elaborate menus were the rule, he would sigh for plain fare.

Senator Clark has inherited his father's love for the succulent Missouri dish. Furthermore, he has, in turn, passed on to his own sons, Champ Clark 3d, and the 6-year-old twins, Marsh and Kimball, a liking for it. It is a happy time in the Clark household on Quebec street northwest when hog jowl and greens grace the dinner table, which they do at least once a week. Sometimes on his way from the Capitol, Senator Clark stops at the market and personally shops for his pet dinner. He knows how to pick out a good hog jowl, too, as the market men will tell you.

Underwood & Underwood.
MRS. CHAMP CLARK,

Hog Jowl and Mustard Greens.

According to the recipe used by Mrs. Clark, the first step is to select a tender hog jowl and a good supply of mustard greens, the younger the better, as youth adds to their tenderness. If desired, kale and turnip tops may be cooked with the mustard greens, but most of the devotees of this dish prefer their mustard greens straight.

Wash the mustard greens thoroughly in at least 15 or 20 changes of water. Then place them in boiling water in which the hog jowl has been cut into small pieces. Now put aside all idea of rapid cooking because this dish properly prepared takes three or four hours of slow cooking to reach the needed perfection for a Missourian's palate.

Serve it on a big platter and be sure when the individual plates are filled to see that each one has in addition to a generous supply of the greens tasty bits of hog jowl as well. Above all, be generous with seconds.

Alertness Held Way to Avert Many Cancers

Since There's No Cure, We Must Prevent Growths, Cutter Explains.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

THE German poet, Goethe, once said that nothing is spontaneous in nature. Goethe, who was a scientist as well as the most distinguished literary light of his day, uttered these words as his own abiding conviction that some origin or cause would be found for every natural phenomenon. This statement was made many years before specific knowledge of microbes was available.

Those who fully comprehend the widespread search for the cause of cancer can clearly understand the abject despair that faces the physician when confronted with this disease after it has passed the period when it may be relieved by surgery, X-ray, or radium.

Research Shows Mode of Attack.

In the search for the specific cause—which some day, let us hope, will be discovered—we have learned much about the nature of the disease and its mode of attack and of spread. There are many curative measures which may be successfully employed if the presence of the disease is discovered early. It is only in those cases where neglect or failure to recognize the situation has permitted cancer growths to extend into vital tissues that the physician is helpless. It is safe to say that a reduction of 25 or more per cent of cancer deaths is now possible if alert guards are stationed along the cancer fronts. We can not cure cancer in its late stages, therefore we must rely on prevention.

Must Recognize All Possibilities.

When examining patients for any condition every physician should recognize irritations that possess cancer possibilities. This search may be made without alarming the patient. As a result of the examination the assurance may be given in most instances that there is nothing in or about the body that would lead to the identification of beginning cancer.

Republicans Get Maryland Roads' Posts

Democrats Are Ousted in Wide Shape-up for 2d District.

Court Fight on Changes in Cecil County Off to August 7.

By the Associated Press.

Chestertown, Md., July 31.—Wholesale personnel changes in the district No. 2 staff of the State roads commission were disclosed today as the court fight over other changes by the commission in neighboring Cecil County was recessed until August 7.

Rolph Townsend, district engineer for the commission, announced these personnel changes:

Cecil County, which has been included in the district with Kent, Queen Annes, Caroline and Talbot Counties, has been transferred to the fourth district with headquarters at Towson, Md.

Lewin Deputy, Chestertown, has been promoted to county engineer for Kent and Queen Annes Counties, replacing Gilbert B. Taylor as county roads supervisor in Kent, and J. R. E. Turpin in Queen Anne.

Others Named.

J. Russell Summers is the new engineer in Talbot County and Harry Waldorf in Caroline County.

Under the new set-up, county engineers will supervise all roads, State and county, in their territories.

H. Bates Chairs will have charge of maintenance and construction in Kent and Queen Annes Counties and Richard B. Groves in Talbot and Caroline Counties.

All the new appointees are Republicans, replacing Democrats.

The changes were announced a day after Dr. Homer E. Tabler, chairman of the roads commission, had testified in Cecil County Circuit Court at Elkton that it was not the intention of the commission to dismiss Democratic roads officials and replace them with Republicans.

Says Democrats Retained.

Dr. Tabler was testifying in the action in which the Cecil County commissioners contested the dismissal of Joseph Richards, Democratic roads supervisor for the county, and the appointment of William Cameron, a Republican, to succeed him. The commission chairman also testified that Democrats had been retained in five counties—Caroline, Queen Annes, Kent, Frederick nad Charles.

Hearing of the case occupied several days, with most of the testimony having to do with the condition of the county roads under Richards' regime.

Judges J. Owen Knott and Thomas J. Keating excused other witnesses summoned to appear and gave counsel in the action a week to prepare their briefs before making their arguments to the court. Arguments are scheduled to begin August 7.

Rally at Leesburg To Feature Primary

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Leesburg, Va., July 31.—After a more or less apathetic beginning, the Democratic campaign, which will close with the primary election Tuesday, is occupying the attention of a large number of Loudoun County voters. A rally will be held on the courthouse lawn in Leesburg Saturday night, when State Senator Cecil Connor will close his campaign for renomination. Connor is opposed by Thomas B. Glascock, of Upperville, who has made an active campaign for the nomination.

In the race for the House of Delegates, P. J. Coleman, supervisor from Broad Run District, is battling with H. C. Thompson, banker and farmer, for the position made vacant by Wilbur C. Hall, now chairman of the conservation committee.

The biggest fight for office is being made for the Commonwealth's attorneyship, where vigorous campaigns throughout the county are being made by the two candidates, Mayor Charles F. Harrison and Fenton Connor.

Growers Again Insure Crops Against Hail

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., July 31.—After a lapse of several years hail insurance is once more being taken out extensively by peach and apple growers in this section. This form of insurance was discontinued because of large losses, but recently the companies have evol·ed a new plan which they figure will reduce their risk and at the same time offer protection to the grower.

The hail insurance for orchards is used principally as a protection against total loss of income for the year, insurance men say.

21 New Cases Raise Malady Total to 229

Infantile Paralysis Continues to Grow in Virginia.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., July 31.—Twenty-one reports of infantile paralysis, the largest number in any one day during this summer's epidemic, sent Virginia's total to 229 today.

Fifty-six cases have been reported in the last three days, 20 having been registered yesterday and 15 Monday.

Today's record number were received from Albemarle, 5; Augusta, 1; Chesterfield, 1; Henrico, 1; Madison, 1; Orange, 1; Roanoke, 1; Washington, 1; Lynchburg City, 1; Richmond City, 3, and Roanoke City, 5. Augusta, Madison and Washington counties had not previously reported a case.

At Marion, the Smythe County board of health banned children under 16 from public gatherings and warned that if the malady continued to spread the Smythe County Fair, scheduled the last week in August, and the White Top Folk Music Festival, planned for August 16-17, would be called off.

Buckingham County forbade the assembly of the James River Baptist Association, which was to have met at Chestnut Grove Church tomorrow and Friday.

Maryland Has 9th Case Of Infantile Paralysis.

Baltimore, July 31 (AP).—A case of infantile paralysis reported today from Baltimore County brings to nine the total number of such cases reported in Maryland since January 1, Dr. R. H. Riley, State health officer said. In the similar period of 1934 the total number of cases was five.

Latest to contract the disease was a 9-year-old boy living in Idelwild.

Washington County Outbreak Is Denied

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., July 31.—Dr. W. Ross Cameron, health officer, announced today there was no infantile paralysis in Washington County. Local physicians have been besieged during the last week by inquiries as a result of rumors there were several cases here.

The health officer said the public would be informed if any cases develop and that he was prepared to supply serum when necessary. About 100 children here have been given the serum developed by a Philadelphia physician.

Rites Held at Culpeper For Meningitis Victim.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Culpeper, Va., July 31.—Funeral services were held here this afternoon for Herbert Newlon Hutcherson, jr., 18, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. N. Hutcherson, of Culpeper County, who died in a Washington hospital yesterday morning of mastoiditis and spinal meningitis.

Radio System Appears Certain at Hagerstown

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., July 31.—A radio call system for Hagerstown's police department appeared certain today after a demonstration of a portable short wave sending and receiving set by the U. S. Army here yesterday. Several members of the city council, previously opposed to the installation, said they now favor such a radio system, which will cost $2,000 to install here. The board of street commissioners, one member of which is a police commissioner, already has approved the installation.

Hagerstown, two weeks ago, motorized its police department. At the same time the police department was placed on an 8-hour day.

Trinkle to Aid Price Drive; Lauds Glass

Supports Richmond Man for Governorship Nomination.

Denies Reports He Will Run Against Virginia Senior Senator.

By the Associated Press.

Roanoke, Va., July 31.—A declaration that he will support James H. Price for Governor of Virginia, coupled with a denial of reports that he might run against Senator Carter Glass in 1936, was made by former Gov. E. Lee Trinkle here today.

Asked if he expected to support Price, the former Governor replied: "Yes, I expect to support Jim Price. He is a good man and I am convinced that 98 per cent of the Democrats in Virginia would be glad to see him in the Governor's chair."

Trinkle added that he thinks Price has been a good Democrat and faithful "organization man." "I am an organization man," he said. "Price proved in 1933 and previously that he is also. And I hope sincerely that he will be supported by the so-called organization faction, for otherwise a bitter fight may develop that will retard progress."

He said, too, that he was supporting Price because "the Richmonder deserves the office, because Richmond is entitled to a Governor and because, above all, the nomination of Price will tend to prevent the disruption of the Democratic Party in Virginia."

Asked if he would run against Glass, Trinkle said: "I shall not run against Senator Glass. He is making Virginia a better Senator than I could or anyone else. He is one of the greatest men who ever represented Virginia in the Senate."

The interviewer was warned, however, not to assume "from this that I expect to stay out of politics all the rest of my life. No man with any sense can tell what he will do in the future, but certainly I have no idea of running against Glass."

Unless "the organization follows the natural course and indorses Price," he said, "there may be a lot of Roosevelt stuff in the Virginia campaign that does not belong there. We've got to think about Virginia first in a State campaign."

Baltimore Burglar Is Beset by Family

He Dives Through Window; Patrolman Arrests.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, July 31.—A burglar who invaded the home of Jacob Ruddle here early today found himself beset by Ruddle, Mrs. Ruddle, two of their children and a patrolman.

Mrs. Ruddle screamed when she awakened to find the man in the house and Ruddle and two of his sons, Samuel, 15, and Isaac, 12, grappled with the burglar.

Patrolman Harry J. Coughlan, who was a block away, heard the fuss and ran to investigate, but before he arrived the burglar broke away and dived through a window.

Coughlan arrested Norman Waters, Negro, after a chase. Waters, who was released in May after serving a two-year term for burglary, was held on that charge again.

The school at Sharpsburg would cost $65,000 and the one at Maugansville $45,000. A bill providing for bond issues failed at the recent session of the Legislature, but the commissioners are empowered to act under a previous legislative act while a 45 per cent Federal grant may be available.

United Action Urged to End Bridge Tolls

Issue Precipitated by Fight for Free Span at Williamsport.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Shepherdstown, W. V., July 31.—A current move to free Eastern Panhandle bridges of tolls through State or Federal action will get nowhere until all three toll bridges in the area are linked into one project, an aroused community spirit gets behind the move, and State and Federal funds are allotted for the purchase of the present structures, according to C. S. Musser, Shepherdstown editor. The issue has been precipitated recently by a concentrated move to free the bridge at Williamsport, Md., of tolls.

"For 25 years," Musser said, "the agitation for free bridges has been going on. The net result is just about nothing because the moves have been made spasmodically. Failure will continue until Eastern Panhandle citizens and western Maryland citizens unite to demand that the tolls be lifted.

"Purchasing the present bridges is the biggest stumbling block. The bridges before the automobile age were not so prosperous. But with modern highways bridges are paying enormous dividends.

"The Shepherdstown Bridge, for instance, in 1932 paid 100 per cent on its capital of $25,500. That capital was invested 40 years ago. Depreciation has now written that off, in a bookkeeping sense. The stockholders have been repaid many times over the money they put in the bridge.

Bridge Paid 160 Per Cent Dividend.

"The Harpers Ferry Bridge, purchased for $5,000 from the B. & O. Railroad, with earned capital stock added until it now stands capitalized at $45,000, paid 160 per cent dividends in 1932, from the reports made by the companies to State Public Service Commission.

"The Williamsport bridge people were smarter financially. They increased their stock, by a stock dividend, and their dividend was only 34 per cent in 1932.

"Dividends like this make it plain why the owners want prices for their bridges which no State agency could pay without a public scandal.

"A year ago, for instance, the Sherpherdstown Bridge Co. was offered $25,000 for the 40-year-old structure, or 100 per cent on their capital investment. They refused this. A month ago they were offered $40,000, and turned this down."

Musser estimates that close to $2,000,000 would be required to purchase these three bridges at owners' prices and convert them for modern traffic or build new ones in more desirable locations. Shepherdstown and Harpers Ferry each would require about $700,000, and Williamsport Bridge between $500,000 and $600,000.

Condemnation Held Solution.

"The fair answer to these demands is governmental condemnation and the setting of a price agreed upon as fair to both bridge owners and public," Musser said. "A recently enacted Federal statute gives two States power to do this jointly, and West Virginia has passed enabling legislation but Maryland must rely upon authority conferred upon its Public Service Commission. There seems little or no sentiment in high places in Maryland toward getting these bridges toll-free.

"Both Jefferson and Berkeley counties have sizable quotas in State road funds due these two counties. These should have been used long since in bridge purchase and construction. State road commission has built and bought several interstate bridges in this way, at Paw Paw and at Hancock, for instance. It might be done here, if pressure enough were exerted by the people of this section."

Virginia Towns Get $948,195 In ABC Profits

Sum Amounts to Almost 40 Cents Per Capita; State's Share Is $500,000.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., July 31.—State warrants aggregating $948,195, representing the localities' share of ABC liquor profits to June 30, will be mailed cities, towns and counties of Virginia on Friday, Sidney Day, assistant comptroller, announced today.

The distribution, authorized by the ABC act passed by the 1934 General Assembly, amounts to a fraction less than 40 cents per capita. Payments will be withheld temporarily from Petersburg and Dinwiddie County, and from Danville and Pittsylvania County, Day said, pending adjustment among those representative units of population changes resulting from annexation of county territory by the cities.

The division to counties totaled 591,019 and includes:

Girl Charged With Murder Denies Drowned Babe Is Hers

By the Associated Press.

Staunton, Va., July 31.—A warrant charging murder was served on a 21-year-old unmarried mother in Augusta County Jail here today after Commonwealth's Attorney John D. White announced he had "sufficient evidence" that a baby found drowned in the South River at Waynesboro was hers.

Pauline Halsey Carter, who was confronted with the infant's body yesterday, hysterically sobbed "it doesn't look like my child" and screamed at officers to "leave me alone."

Authorities then said they would compare a print of the baby's foot with the similar record of a child the girl said was born to her at a Roanoke hospital, but White stated today "we have sufficient evidence now without doing that."

The young mother had contended she left her baby with relatives when she arrived at Waynesboro Saturday, but investigators have not been able to find the child.

U. S. Agent Kills Farmer In Still Raid

Tenant Tried to Shoot It Out With Officer in Virginia Woods.

Federal Men Cleaning Up Notorious Illicit Liquor Area.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Leesburg, Va., July 31.—Delmas Duncan, 27-year-old tenant farmer, was shot and killed by Federal Agent John Millan this afternoon 100 yards from a whisky still as Federal men resumed activities to clean up the densely-wooded Broad Run area, 12 miles southeast of here.

The shooting occurred on a farm owned by H. J. Fadley a few miles from where Clarence J. McClary, Alexandria policman, was killd by "Old Tom" Quesenberry, sharpshooting mountaineer moonshiner. Both Millan and John H. Lemmon, the other agent who figured in today's skirmish, participated in the Quesenberry manhunt. Millan was with McClary when he was shot.

This afternoon's shooting occurred as the two Federal men surprised Duncan and a helper, Jack Mann, of Ryan, Va., as they were operating a still in a wooded ravine near a stream.

According to Millan he pursued Duncan through a thicket for several yards, opening fire when the moonshiner turned upon him with a pistol. Duncan was wounded twice as his revolver clicked without firing. He rolled into the stream, dying instantly.

Near the still, the two raiders said they found two gallons of liquor, a quantity of yeast, meal, sugar and ground rye.

Quesenberry was taken to Richmond this morning in the custody of W. N. Miller, a guard.

The one-eyed mountaineer who changed his plea to guilty in the midst of his trial on July 2 in Loudoun County Circuit Court and was sentenced to a 20-year term in the State penitentiary for the murder of McClary on March 17, thanked Sheriff and Mrs. E. S. Adarin for their kindness when he told them good-by this morning and gave the sheriff a necktie.

"Annapolis Farewell" Proves Fine Picture That May Have World Premiere Here

Reported Best Academy Film Ever Offered

Local Debs Played Parts; Barkers Are Boosted; Theater Chatter.

Reprinted from yesterday's last edition.

By Nelson B. Bell.

Numerous representatives of Washington's upper social, political and diplomatic strata either having participated in it, or watched it in the making, keen local interest centers in the probable ranking among current film releases of Paramount's production of "Annapolis Farewell," photographed for the greater part at the U. S. Naval Academy at Annapolis, Md., early this summer.

It is pleasant, therefore, to be able to say with some authority that "Annapolis Farewell" has turned out to be a screen play considerably above the average level of excellence. I am led to this belief by a personal letter bearing date as of July 29, from a prominent member of the New York home office staff of Paramount, who was present in Annapolis throughout the filming of the picture, which I quote, in part:

Better Than Expected.

Word has just flashed in from the Coast that "Annapolis Farewell" is a splendid picture.

The unusual happened—a film which script and cast indicated would be of no better than average "program" quality has turned out to be more impressive than anyone expected.

The Coast is so excited about it that the home office has caught the contagion. There is an idea here that the picture should be given its send-off in Washington. It is all Navy and Naval Academy, as you know, and happens to be the kind of picture that the Government likes to have shown. Also, it is said to be the most accurate picture of life at Annapolis ever made.

If, when the film is screened here, all of these things are found to be true, it is expected that we will lay down a plan to give the film a Washington premiere with a big flash.

And more to the same effect—with a touch of personal business for good measure—but that will give you a rough idea of what Paramount executives think they have in the picture that whipped so many local debutantes into a state of jitters while it was being made and they were being filmed as representatives on the set of the casting judgment of the local drama desks.

Okay, gentlemen, wheel in the body!

Those who think the production of "Trilby" by the Roadside Theater group was a simple undertaking, fraught with none of the customary perplexities of who-owns-what-and-how-do-you-get-it-away-from-him problems, don't know the half of it.

When the Roadsiders first decided to do this ancient favorite, they had in their possession what turned out to be a pirated script of the play. It developed, upon investigation, that upon his death, Paul M. Potter, the author of the dramatic version of the George Du Maurier novel, bequeathed the stage rights to the drama to his friend, William A. Brady, the famous producer and father of Alice, who comes to RKO-Keith's screen today in "Lady Tubbs."

When approached upon the matter of a two-week rental of his property, Mr. Brady named a price that every member of the Roadside organization would have had to pawn the family jewels to pay. But "Bill" Brady is an old-timer always willing to listen to reason from kids trying to get along in the theater he loves so well. So he immediately brought the price within reach, precluded the possibility of suits and, altogether, personally saw to it that that goose was hung high for the boys and girls.

For some odd reason, his telegram was delivered at my desk so, for once, I know what I am talking about. And having seen it opening night, I am able to say that "Trilby" is well worth the trip out that Rockville pike. That makes twice!

And Now the Pros.

There are, it seems, two sides to every question. Since it took almost three months to get "The Scoundrel" booked on a local screen, one week longer may not be too much to devote to discussion, pro and con, of this Ben Hecht-Charles MacArthur starring vehicle for the distinguished and variegated talents of Noel Coward.

Mr. John W. Ward, of the Hotel Grafton, having expounded one view of the situation created by Mr. Coward's appearance in "The Scoundrel," we now turn the forum over to Miss Isabelle M. Parks, a close student of the theater in all its branches, and, I am happy to say, one of this column's most valued correspondents. I give you, under date of July 29, Miss Parks:

My dear Mr. Bell: No matter how you play it, you can't win! If Noel Coward in his first screen appearance had never deviated from his usual sartorial perfection, if he had always been very careful about camera angles, and if he had invariably turned toward the public only his profile (his left is quite superior to the right, in the event you didn't notice), I suppose some movie-goers would have moaned, "What does that guy think he is, another Valentino?"

"You Know the Worst."

It seemed to me the beginning of "The Scoundrel," aside from being funny, was quite chummy. It was as if Mr. Coward said, "Here I am, at my worst. Now you know all. You won't fall for me because I'm a dead ringer for Max Baer or Clark Gable. If you like me it will be because I do know how to act and because you succumb to the charm of my total personality." After which the gentleman in question settled down and gave a performance that demonstrated once more that a real actor doesn't need to know anything about movie tricks. He can stroll in front of a camera and act circles around the average Hollywood product.

Of course, this is not the first time Mr. Coward has annoyed certain sections of the public in a similar fashion. There was the famous pajama scene in "Design For Living," which seemed to affect some squeamish souls unfavorably. There were Mr. Lunt's infamous bare feet in "Point Valaine," which apparently caused mental anguish in some spectators. Incidentally, without having taken a poll or having made an actual record of the vote, it seems to me that more objections came from the male contingent than from the feminine.

It occurs to me that perhaps this is only another example of male vanity. A man can't get away from the idea that he looks rather ridiculous only partially clad (unless he happens to be a Johnny Weismuller), and it pains him to see a member of his sex held up before the public eye as a slightly humorous specimen.

In any event, I have a suggestion for your friend, Mr. Ward, that might save him future embarrassment. I was highly amused to read in a movie magazine the other day a mournful note from a poor soul who lives in Brockton, Mass. She had seen "The Scarlet Pimpernel" in a more enlightened community and decided to repeat in her own home town. Imagine her surprise to find that the local censors had deleted from Leslie's little poem the last line, which read, "That demned elusive Pimpernel." It occurs to me that if Mr. Ward could just arrange to see his movies in Brockton he would probably be spared any sight of Mr. Coward in the semi-nude. In fact, he would almost certainly be spared any view of Mr. Coward at all, unless that gentleman decides to appear as Little Eva.

About That Last Month.

Reverting to "The Scoundrel," although I doubt if any one in the world, with the possible exceptions of Messrs. Coward, Hecht and MacArthur, enjoyed this picture as much as I did, I find myself entirely unable to take anything about it seriously. All this talk about "psychological drama," "daring experiment" and "ART in capital letters" slays me.

How could anyone regard so seriously this composite picture of what the three gentlemen involved wish they were and think they are? The tender admiration with which his three creators viewed Mr. Mallare was, to me, highly diverting. As for that ending, with the lovely moral (and since when have Hecht and MacArthur been interested in any kind of morals?), it was Hollywood at its worst and it was only made acceptable by Noel Coward's stunning performance in the leading role. Despite which fact, I think that Coward was well aware that Tony Mallare would have wasted no last month on earth looking for tears. It requires little imagination to figure out how he would have spent his last days. And, if you ask me, such an ending would have improved the movie vastly.

However, I'm registering no kick of any kind against "The Scoundrel." Semi-nude or fully clothed, sinister or repentant, dead or alive, Mr. Coward offered grand entertainment and, as I said before, showed Hollywood what a real actor can do. Sincerely, (Signed) ISABELLE M. PARKS.

So you pays your money and you takes your cherce. There are, it seems, two sides to every question.

But what I am now awaiting is the letter from the person who will merely remark, "Well, what's the shooting all about, anyway? After all, 'The Scoundrel' is just another picture, so what?"

To revert, momentarily, since so many have asked about it, yes, "Trilby" has been filmed twice within comparatively recent years—both times by First National, which, now, is practically synonymous with Warner Brothers. The first cast was headed by Arthur Edmund Carewe, as Svengali, and that brief, blonde French importation, Andree Lafayette, as Trilby; the second by John Barrymore and Marian Marsh in the respective parts. So now you know.

Local Barkers Boosted.

Rudolph Berger, Washington branch manager for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, and chief barker of the Washington Variety Club, Tent No. 11, in the national organization, and Division Manager Carter Barron, of Loew's, Inc., yesterday were named to important posts in the national executive councils of Variety by National Chief Barker John H. Harris, of Pittsburgh, Pa.

In the quaint "show" parlance of Variety, Barker Berger was named a member of the Billers Committee, which publicizes the affairs of all national Variety tents. Barker Barron—all members of Variety are "barker" — was named the Main Guy, or chairman, of the Midway Concessions committee and also was named to another important group.

The Midway Concessions committee supervises the installation of new tents in other cities, acts on the applications of cities desiring to establish units of Variety and investigates the activities of all existing tents. The other committee to which Mr. Barron was appointed will act in a supervisory capacity over all tents of Variety in this sector.

Donates Equipment.

The local Variety Club recently closed its active summer season with the Showboat Cruises down the Potomac and Monday luncheon at the Willard. It will resume its alternate luncheons and smokers, with duly appointed "kings for the day" at each, soon after the Labor Day holiday.

The Showboat Cruise was so successful financially that it was possible to provide a motion-picture projection equipment valued at $1,000 for the pleasure of the patients at the Glendale Sanitarium out of the Variety's welfare fund, for the benefit of which the cruise was given.

The circus is coming to town.

Oh, I know the Ringling Brothers-Barnum & Bailey outfit has been here—this is another one. The dates are August 15 and 16 and the name, Hagenbeck-Wallace and Sells Brothers-Floto Circus. This is a good show, too, boasting ownership of the Clyde Beatty "cats," one of the most sensational animal acts ever staged, and, as a member of its staff, the animal trainer who recently wrote a story for the Saturday Evening Post declaring that most of the to-do over the hazards of wild-animal training was the bunk! Maybe he will show Mr. Beatty how to handle that mixed cat act.

Anyhow, hold your horses, the elephants are coming!

On-Second-Thought Note.

Mr. Charles Spencer Chaplin evidently has reconsidered. Instead of calling his "Picture No. 3," as it was known in work, "Charlie Chaplin in Modern Times," thus implying that he deems himself an epic, or a saga, or something, the new work now is to be known merely as "Modern Times," with Charlie Chaplin in it—otherwise, Charlie Chaplin in "Modern Times."

I wonder why, in the old days, no one ever thought to call Charlie the Chaplin of the Sennett?

Appears on Local Screen Today

Anticipating the announced opening date by two full days, Alice Brady will be seen, beginning today, at RKO-Keith's Theater in the title role of "Lady Tubbs," a Universal picture which is said to afford her the most fruitful opportunity she has had to date before the cameras. The story is by Homer Croy, a writer with a keen sense of humor, and Miss Brady's leading man is Alan Mowbray, the talented English actor, who scored so decisively with Miriam Hopkins in "Becky Sharp," the first feature made by the new three-tone Technicolor process, recently seen on the same screen.

Post Staunton Tuition Contest Closes Tonight

Competitors Must Have Their Essays Postmarked Before Midnight.

Today marks the closing of The Washington Post Staunton scholarship contest and, to be accepted, the required essays on "Why I Would Like to Go to Staunton" must be postmarked before midnight tonight. All week these letters, each betraying the eagerness of the writer to win the coveted prize of two years at the famed military academy, have been coming to The Post, and tomorrow's mail is expected to swell the total considerably.

When the essays have been read and the information of the entry blanks has been studied, six or eight of the contestants who rank highest in the estimation of the judges will be summoned to The Post to have their pictures taken for publication, and for further, personal examination. From this group, the final winner will be selected.

That fortunate boy will enter Staunton Academy in September to spend two years there, enjoying the benefits of education and contacts which a school of high standards provides. The second place winner will go to Camp Calvert, on Breton Bay, for a week's vacation at the end of August.

The winners in this contest, which is being conducted by The Post in cooperation with the District Department of the American Legion, will be announced as soon as the judges come to a decision.

Ancient Millstone Becomes Memorial

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Smithfield, Pa., July 31.—The discovery of a 260-year-old millstone on the site of one of the first grist mills west of the Alleghenies and plans to transform it into a memorial marker over the grave of its owner, were announced at the annual reunion of the Jacob Ruble clan here.

The mill, family records show, was established by Samuel Ruble, who came to Bunker Hill in Spring Hill Township from Loudoun County, Va., in 1772. He was the founder of the long line of millwrights prominent in Fayette County until the present generation.

The section in which Samuel Ruble and his family settled was then in old Monongahlia County, Va., which later was diveded between Virginia and Pennsylvania. Samuel Ruble, his wife and son, Jacob, are buried a quarter of a mile fro mthe old mill site.

A committee of the Ruble clan, remarking the site from old records, found the 1,500-pound granite millstone buried under several feet of earth. It will be taken to the cemetery and placed over the three graves. Funds were raised for a bronze plaque on which will be engraved the names of the three early members of the family.

Movie Boners.

Hollywood, July 31.

DICK POWELL and Joan Blondell take a ride in Powell's taxicab in the flicker, "The Broadway Gondolier." As Joan is about to say good night, she tells Powell to be at the studio at 4 o'clock the next afternoon. According to Samuel Freeman, who makes a bid to become a member of the Movie Boners' Club, Joan apparently forgot that she told him to be at the studio at 10 o'clock in the morning just a few scenes earlier. It is therefore no wonder that Powell is late for the audition.

Also, there is a sequence in which Powell is driving Miss Blondell to the pier, and you can see the baggage in the cab, yet when they reach the pier no baggage is evident.

"Charlie Chan in Egypt" also does a few neat tricks. Aaron Kritzer claims that when the master detective's hat falls off and is stepped on by snowshoes and then returned to him in the next scene, it is a new hat which is given to him.

In the "Arizonian," Richard Dix completes his mauling of one of the bad men and walks away from a group of rather crestfallen henchmen of the bad man. While walking away, writes Edward Peckenpaugh, Dix is whistling a tune, and the tune is "The Isle of Capri."

This is an easy one to answer. Perhaps Richard Dix was whistling the old tune from which "Isle of Capri" was taken.

ONLY a mere quotation from Shakespeare is used in the flicker, "Strangers All," and the movie fans are finding fault with the way the bard's lines are being used. You can imagine what will happen when an entire picture of a Shakespearean play appears.

In "Strangers All," a character on the witness stand quotes a passage from "The Merchant of Venice," and according to M. M. Stenkevich, who claims to be an authority on Shapespeare, the correct passage reads: "The quality of mercy is not strained. It droppeth as the gentle rain from heaven." When quoting these lines in the flicker, the character said: "Like the gentle rain" instead of "as."

Going from William Shakespeare to Wheeler and Woolsey—for it will happen that his plays will probably appear on a double feature movie program with Wheeler and Woolsey to entice the movie fans—Lee McEachern claims a flat in "Nit Wits." Bert is seen throwing water on Woolsey, and in the very next flash Woolsey's clothes are perfectly dry.

It is easy to understand why Bing Crosby married Dixie Lee, writes Margaret Reynolds. Dixie is some gal, and if you saw her in "Love in Bloom," you'd agree.

Miss Lee took 48 dollars and gave ten dollars of it to Joe Morrison and 50 of it to another character in the flicker. This is a good trick, even if you can't do it.

"It is the best of the share-the-wealth plans I know," says Miss Reynolds, "and I'm certain Huey Long will make it his platform as soon as his new picture censor board tells him about it."

* * * *

A LARGE number of movie fans have written in to tell about a boner in the flicker, "Les Miserables." Among them is Charles Paner, who insists that during the sequence in which Fredric March and Charles Laughton are doing their acting in the exciting sewer scene, flashes of bright sunlight could be seen shining through the open sewers. However, the time of the incident was at night.

Really, I don't know whether this is a movie boner or not. It may not be the sun shining through; since it is night and the moon is out, it could be the moonlight casting those bright flashes. Or perhaps they were the studio lights on the set which got into the picture. When I see Director Richard Boleslawski or Cameraman Gregg Toland, who made the flicker, I will ask them.

According to a person who signs her letter, "Long Lines' Operator," motion pictures are more advanced than the American Telephone & Telegraph Co.

"In "Oil for the Lamps of China," there is a scene where New York is calling Shanghai, and according to the writer of the letter, "as yet we have no service to China."

In the flicker, "Shanghai," there is an important scene actually showing a phone call being made from that city to New York. It seems logical that there is telephone service between the two cities, but perhaps the writer from the phone company is right and the wire as well as the twain never meet.

It is proposed to finance the sewer project by a works project grant from the Federal Government.

THE proverbial "nineteenth hole" really existed at the Maxwelton Braes course, in Wisconsin. You get a hole-in-one or nothing. If you are successful a mechanism tripped by the golf ball automatically delivers a medal to you as evidence of the feat. The hole is 60 yards from the tee, and must be reached by a pitched ball to stay on the green. If the ball does stay on the funnel-shaped green, it rolls down to the hole and through a hidden tube out to the side. On its way it trips a trigger which causes a bronze medal to be delivered to the player.

The rules of the hole are: You get only one shot, and then only after you have played the other 18 holes.

Mustafa I, after 40 years a prisoner at the command of his brother, Sultan Ahmed, emerged from his prison to succeed his brother to the throne—and, strange as it seems, the brother who kept him prisoner was the brother who made him sultan. Even at that Mustafa was fortunate in just being imprisoned by his brother—for up until that time it was customary for a sultan to murder all his brothers the moment he came into power. Most famous example of this custom was the case of Sultan Muhammed III. He had 19 brothers—and murdered them all.

Strange as it seems, when match heads are dipped the material that is used to make the heads is mixed with water to give it proper consistency.

With Shirley Povich

WESLEY CHEEK FERRELL seems to be conducting a one-man debunking campaign against the popular belief that pitchers can't hit or are not supposed to hit. Four home runs in his last four games indicate that Ferrell is one pitcher who uses his bat for something else other than to knock the dirt out of his spikes.

POVICH.

Among the more disgusting scenes in a big league ball park is the sight of an extremely healthy 6-foot pitcher, or perhaps only a 5-foot 10-inch pitcher, standing meekly at the plate, taking three futile strikes at the ball and repairing to the bench without a censure. A pitcher isn't supposed to hit in the big leagues and no blame attaches to their failures.

But Ferrell is among that select group of pitchers—the 5 per cent comprised of Earl Whitehill, Red Ruffing, Ralph Winegarner, Mel Harder, and Buck Newsom—who take their hitting seriously. They take pains to get more hitting practice, and when they are at the plate they are no setup for the pitcher with their fate a foregone conclusion. When they are in the line-up, the manager has nine, not eight, men in the batting order.

The most that is expected of a pitcher in the big leagues is that he can bunt. Half of 'em don't even learn to do that. Games lost because a pitcher isn't able to produce a decent bunt at the proper moment are almost a daily occurrence. For that matter, the pitchers have a ready out on that score. Half of the highest-paid men in the big leagues aren't good bunters. As an example, Earl Averill, of the Cleveland Indians, has attempted only one bunt in five seasons.

IF the evidence is not misleading, and the Cleveland Indians do sign Donie Bush to replace Manager Walter Johnson, it will be a pretty contrast in personalities for the Cleveland fans. If Owner Alva Bradley is seeking to get away from the Johnson type of manager, then he could choose no greater extreme than the fire-eating Donie Bush.

Unlike Johnson, who was content to suffer in silence when his ball players kicked away ball games, Bush is the type who calls a spade a spade and a bum ball player a bum. It would indeed be interesting to hear Bush clash with such as Earl Averill, the pampered hero of the Indians who can do no wrong as far as Cleveland fans are concerned, and who was the prime mover against Johnson.

Averill would play ball for Bush and with Bush or he wouldn't play ball at all for the Indians. Bush has had experience in curbing prima donnas and the Cleveland club is full of 'em. It was Bush who first fined Kiki Cuyler and then suspended him when Cuyler refused to respect Bush's managerial authority when the little man was manager of the Pirates. And it was Bush who braved the ire of both fans and the Pirates' owners by keeping Cuyler, his biggest star, out of the 1927 World Series with the Yankees, despite the fact that the Yanks were winning four straight games.

It was Bush who was given credit in some quarters for the first pennant victory of the Washington team in 1924. Without attempting to detract from the feat of Bucky Harris, then the boy manager, baseball men pointed out that Harris inherited from Bush the team which won the flag. Bush landed the Washington club in fourth place the season before, the first time in more than ten years that the Nats finished in the first division.

Bush Sought As Leader Of Tribe

Minneapolis Pilot Held Likely Successor to Walter Johnson.

Evans Has Conference With Ex-Manager of Griffmen.

By the Associated Press.

MINNEAPOLIS, July 31.—Owen (Donie) Bush, in a somewhat cryptic statement tonight, gave impetus to reports that he might soon return to the major leagues.

Bush, aggressive pilot of the Minneapolis Baseball Club, said that even if he got the "Cleveland job" he would not leave the Millers until the end of the present association season. Bush gained fame both as a player and manager in the major leagues.

Evans Admits Talk.

Cleveland, July 31 (AP).—Billy Evans, general manager of the Cleveland Indians, said tonight he had the assurance of Donie Bush, manager of the Minneapolis American Association club, that Bush would like to return to the major leagues.

Reports that the owners of the Cleveland club were looking for a new manager to succeed Walter Johnson became current yesterday when Alva Bradley, Cleveland president, said he would meet Johnson in Detroit late this week to discuss the future of the team.

Evans, returning from Minneapolis late today, said he had talked to Bush "in a casual way." Evans said he went to Minneapolis in a search for a pitcher to bolster the Cleveland staff.

"I don't even know whether the Cleveland owners would want Bush or not," Evans asserted. "Until you know what Mr. Bradley is going to do in his conference with Johnson, all this talk about a new manager is merely guess work.

"Bush said he would like to return to the majors. He said he was working under an agreement with the Minneapolis management and that the agreement had about a year and a half to run. That's the extent of my conversation with him. It would have been very unethical for me to have gone any further with a man who is the property of another club and working under an agreement."

He has become No. 1 man among possible candidates to pilot the Cleveland Indians in the American League, when, and if, Walter Johnson, present manager, is removed. Johnson's status is expected to be determined definitely at a board of directors' meeting this week-end.

Talks With Evans.

Billy Evans, general manager and vice president of the Indians, came here yesterday, ostensibly to watch the American Association all-star game and look over talent. Afterward he conferred with Bush about the Cleveland job. Bush would not comment.

Evans also talked with Mike Kelley, president of the Millers, about Bush as manager of the Indians, the Minneapolis prexy declared.

While reluctant to see Bush leave, Kelley indicated he would not stand in the midget manager's way. Bush has no contract with Kelley.

The majors are not new to Donie. He broke into organized baseball as a kid of 18, when he was signed to play shortstop for the Dayton Club of the Central League in 1906. Previously he had played on several semipro clubs.

Bought By Detroit.

The next year he was sold to Indianapolis, of the American Association, and his twentieth year of life found him in the majors through a quirk of fate. Detroit at that time had the choice of purchasing either Bush or Rube Marquard, and Marquard apparently had the call until Charley O'Leary, Tiger shortstop, injured his leg.

Fighting for the pennant, the Tigers took Bush immediately.

He went to the Washington Americans in 1922 and a year later was made manager of the club. Bush went to Indianapolis as manager in 1926, returning to the majors as head man of the Pittsburgh Pirates in 1927, where he remained for three years, winning the flag in his first year.

Manages White Sox.

After a disastrous road trip he resigned and was hired as manager of hte Chicago White Sox in 1929. Bush came back to the minors as manager of the Millers in 1932, winning the championship that year and going to Cincinnati the next year at a reported salary of $20,000. He quit at the end of the season When Sidney Weil, at that time principal owner of the Reds, sold his baseball interests.

Kelley rehired Bush in 1934 and again this year. He is a smart manager, one who is not afraid to gamble to win. As a handler of pitchers he has no peer in the minors. Bush prefers sandlot kids to collegians as baseball players. He is 47 years old.

Pirates Smash Cubs' Streak, Split Bill

Chicago Within Half Game of Lead Despite Loss of Second Tilt.

By the Associated Press.

PITTSBURGH, July 31.—Although their latest winning streak was stopped at 11 games, the Chicago Cubs narrowed the gap separating them from the Giants to one-half a game today, when they split a double-header with the Pittsburgh Pirates, while the league leaders were dropping a decision to the Phillies.

The Cubs won the opening contest, 4 to 2, with a four-run rally in the eighth off Cy Blanton for their eleventh straight triumph and twice were within one putout of victory in the second, only to have the Pirates come from behind to win out in the eleventh, 6 to 5. The split left the Cubs with a record of 24 victories in their last 28 games.

Roy Henshaw, who held the Bucs to four hits before giving way for a pinch-hitter in the eighth inning of the first game, came close to registering a double success. He relieved Tex Carleton after the Pirates had scored two runs in the fifth frame of the nightcap and had two out in the ninth when Lloyd Waner clipped him for a double to send Forest Jensen home with the tying run.

Discovery Romps Home for Seventh

Wins Wilson Mile Easily at Odds of 1-10.

By the Associated Press.

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., July 31. Alfred G. Vanderbilt's Discovery won his seventh straight race and his second in five days today when he beat his stablemate, Identify, and Mrs. Dodge Sloane's Psychic Bid in the renewal of the Wilson Mile at Saratoga.

With the five other overnight entries refusing the issue, the Vanderbilt entry was the 1-to-10 choice to whip Mrs. Sloane's 3-year-old, under 126 pounds. Discovery ran the distance in the good time of 1:37 1-5 to earn the purse of $3,475.

Ferrell's 2 Homers Subdue Nats, 6 to 4

By Shirley Povich.

DOWN near the bottom of the box score you will find it: Winning pitcher—Wes Ferrell. But, oh, how that perfunctory notation puts it mildly.

When the Red Sox beat the Nats yesterday, 6 to 4, Wes Ferrell was the winning pitcher all right, but he didn't trust to his pitching to bring him his seventeenth victory of the season. He made certain of that little item by walloping two home runs to establish himself in a commanding lead.

One of those baseball rarities, a pitcher who takes his hitting seriously, Ferrell warmed up against the pitching of Buck Newsom with a single in the second inning. He swung into full stride in the third inning with his first home run far into the left field bleachers with two Red Sox on base.

And Another One!

On his third appearance at bat, Ferrell banged another of Newsom's pitches into the same bleachers with none on base to drive in his fourth run of the game. So hard hit was the ball that Left Fielder Heinie Manush didn't even deign to watch it as it passed over his head and landed near the top of the concrete stands.

Washington made little use of the 12 hits yielded by Ferrell, but the Nats did have the potential winning run on base in the eighth when they scored twice to cut Ferrell's lead to 5-4. The rally petered out when Pinch Hitter Johnny Stone and Joe Kuhel popped up and Relief Pitcher Jack Russell gave the Red Sox another run in the ninth to add to the comforts of Ferrell's lead.

Nearly Escapes.

By dint of some brilliant pinch-hitting, Newsom turned the Sox back runless in the first three innings and he very nearly escaped the three-run damage in the fourth. Rick Ferrell doubled and Cooke beat out a single with none out, but

Giants Lose Ground As Phillies Triumph

3 Homers Account for 5-to-3 Victory.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 31.—The New York Giants' lead dwindled to a half game today when they dropped a 5-to-3 decision to the Phillies while the second-place Cubs were splitting even in a double-header with the Pirates.

Home runs proved to be the downfall of the Giants as Curt Davis turned back the league leaders for the second time this season and his tenth triumph of the year. John Moore and Dolph Camilli hit consecutive homers off Carl Hubbell in the second and Moore added another in the ninth after the screw ball ace had given way to Leon Chagnon.

Fuchs Resigns As President Of Braves

Forfeits Stock Holdings to Adams Who Will Dispose of Club.

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, July 31.—Emil Fuchs, president of the Boston Braves since 1925, today forfeited his majority stock holdings to Charles F. Adams, his vice president, and robbed baseball of one of its most colorful figures by returning to his legal profession.

Fuchs announced his retirement as club president today but Adams will not take actual possession until tomorrow, when Bill McKechnie, who has managed the Braves since 1930, will be installed as pro tem head of the last place club.

Fuchs' retirement was no surprise. Months ago it became known that Adams had given him until August 1 either to regain control of the club, by recovering his own pledged stock and buying out Adams' minority holdings, or step out without further ado.

Served Ultimatum.

Long before the National League season opened, Adams served that ultimatum on Fuchs and when the latter's attempt to have Babe Ruth's great drawing power pull him out of his deep financial hole became a spectacular failure, several weeks ago, it sealed his doom as a baseball magnate.

Although unwilling to add a major league baseball club to his already heavy burdens, Adams will be forced to run the club until Ford Frick, youthful president of the National League, can dig up a purchaser, armed with a twin-barreled bankroll, to take over the franchise.

Adams, after adding Fuchs' stock to his own holdings, now controlls 9,500 of the 14,000-odd shares issued by the Boston National League Club. Any buyer, vouched for by Frick, can purchase the majority holdings for $30 a share. He will then be called upon to wipe out a $200,000 note against the club, held by a Boston bank, and spend several hundreds of thousands to strengthen the team's personnel. Practical

Tigers Score, 9-3, Gain on Idle Yanks

Greenberg Knocks 26th, Bridges Wins 15th as Browns Succumb.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, July 31.—The first place Detroit Tigers raised their lead over the idle second place New York Yankees to three games today as they turned loose a 13-hit bombardment against the St. Louis Browns to win, 9 to 3, evening the series here.

Greenberg, Fox and Marvin Owen provided the bat power behind the pitching of Tommy Bridges, who was credited with his fifteenth victory of the season. Greenberg led the parade to the plate with his twenty-eighth home run of the season in the third inning, a single and triple. Fox had two doubles and a triple, and Owen a single, double and triple. The three got three hits each in four official trips to the plate.

Andrews, who hurled the entire game for St. Louis, was the loser.

With the Yankees not playing, the Tigres and Chicago White Sox took advantage of the idleness to pick up a half game each. The Sox tonight were only a half game out of a second-place tie with the McCarthy men.

St. Louis started the scoring in the second when West and Hemsley crossed the plate on a single by Andrews. The Tigers came right back in the third with a three-run attack to take the lead and stay in front. Bridges, who allowed eight hits, kept them well scattered. Only in the second and sixth, the Browns' scoring innings, were they able to combine two off the Lanky Tennessean.

Campbell Eliminated in Upset; Nordstrom Is Defeated.

By Dave Herman.
A Staff Correspondent.

INDIANAPOLIS, July 31.—Definitely establishing himself as the greatest municipal golfer Washington, D. C., has produced since the halycon days of George Voigt, Claude Rippy, 22-year-old District pay-as-you-go champion, today shot masterful golf to enter the third round of the National Public Links championship.

Only Washington golfer to qualify for match play, Rippy defeated two tough players, eliminating Mike Balega, 19-year-old postoffice clerk, from Minneapolis, 1 up, in a stirring morning duel, and Walter Ambo, of University City, Mo., 5 and 4, in the second round.

Thus did the tall, carefree captain of the ill-fated Washington Harding Cup team find himself as one of the 16 survivors after a day of hectic firing in the "suicide" rounds of the championship.

Tomorrow morning, Rippy will engage Mike Stefanchik young steel worker from Gary, Ind., who put out Jimmy Deeble, of Minneapolis, and Ralph Strafaci, Brooklyn hairdresser.

Campbell Upset Victim.

Albert (Scotty) Campbell, 21-year-old Seattle department store clerk, twice Canadian amateur champion, was the victim of a terrific upset when Fred Gordon, of Santa Monica, Calif., eliminated him, one up, in a thrilling nightcap duel. A former champion, the unemployed Charlie Ferrera, of San Francisco, winner in 1931 and 1933, passed out at the hands of Lloyd Nordstrom, the blonde Davenport, Iowa, bread slice blade salesman, whose 145 won him the title of medalist, by the large margin of 4 and 2. Both played poorly.

Nordstrom's stay in the championship was short lived in the afternoon. He ran up against a tartar in the veteran Robert Tomes, who bounced out the medalist, one up, by shooting the last nine in two under fours.

Nineteen-year-old Robert Armtrong, the Hawaiian star, runner-up last year to defending champion Dave Mitchell, the home-town boy, won his two matches, toppling one George Bradley, of Philadelphia, and Ralph Presby, of Sacramento, both by 5 and 4.

Handsome Dave Mitchell remained in the battle by vanquishing Fred Goate, of Milwaukee, 7 and 6, and Gordon Denny, of Louisville, Ky., 2 and 1, Mitchell had to win four of the last five holes in order to turn back his Southern rival.

Rogers Is Impressive.

Lieut. Kenny Rogers, cocky San Antonio, Tex., Army airman, came through with two impressive victories, defeating Johnny Ross, of Los Angeles, and Len Black, of Louisville. Rogers played bang-up golf in both matches, and looms as a formidable challenger for Mitchell's title.

It was this curly-haired lad who shot a blistering 70 the second day of the qualifying round to tie with Washington's Rippy for third place.

Rippy played beautiful golf against the little Minneapolis lightweight, Balega, who is of Austrian descent. He released a withering blast of pars and birdies to go out in 35, scoring deuces on the short second and fifth.

Balega rounded the turn in 37, 1 over par, and found himself 1 down.

The Rippy-Balega match was one of the most thrilling of the morning round, as the two youngsters halved the last ten holes in a desperate stroke-for-stroke fight. This halving of ten consecutive holes was not noted in any other match, and was a tribute to the equal scoring power of both players.

Rippy shot a 35-37—72, 2 over par, Balega's 74.

In sharp contrast to yesterday's medal play when he three-putted six greens, was Rippy's performance

Ring Revival Seen In S. W. Virginia

Bauers Encouraged Over Professional Prospects.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va,. July 31.—Back from a tour of Southern and Southwest Virginia cities, Joe Bauers, secretary of the Virginia boxing and wrestling commission, today voiced his belief that professional fighting is due for a revival in those sections.

He appeared particularly encouraged over the situation at Roanoke, saying that resumption of indoor shows was planned by Joe Hanna, promoter, about September 1. He discussed the situation with C. R. "Bob" Williams, veteran sports official, who has accepted the job as inspector for Roanoke.

On a visit to Lynchburg, he selected Isadoré P. Oppleman, an alumnus of the University of Virginia, as inspector for that area, and found sentiment for boxing shows to be strong.

Sgt. Byrne Noses Out Early Leaders, Collects Suffolk Purse

Stretch Rush Of Favorite Decisive

21,000 See Four-Horse Battle for Hancock Sweepstakes.

By the Associated Press.

SUFFOLK DOWNS, Boston, July 31.—In a thrilling four-horse finish that brought the 21,000 assembled enthusiasts to their feet in noisy acclaim, Sergeant Byrne, classy golden chestnut sprinter from the Simonetti Stable, scored by a nose in the John Hancock Sweepstakes Handicap, a 6-furlong sprint and feature of the mid-week holiday. The victory was worth $2,110 to the winner that went to the post an 8-to-5 favorite and returned $5.40 to justify the support of his connections.

Advising Anna jumped out of the gate first, but the real early lick was set by Sergeant Byrne, which went to the front almost at once. Going down the back panel he held command until the far turn was reached. Here Charlie Stevenson took him back a little and let Ladfield and Spixi lead into the stretch. When the Idaho boy did unwrap him he went to work, and, plying whip and heel vigorously, he gave his mount enough lift to break him into the winner's circle for the second time at the meeting.

Ladfield did well on the closing rush and nabbed the place position by a half length from Spixi, which had a nose on Happy Go, which figured in the contention in the back stretch. The Vanderbilt entry of Erin Lad and Dreel failed to place, although liked by the "layers" to the extent of 6 to 1.

SAFE AND SOUND, under stout restraint while following the pace for the five furlongs, moved up on the inside to take the command nearing the stretch and, fighting it out courageously all through the stretch, outlasted HAPPY HELEN at the end. HAPPY HELEN, in nearest pursuit of the pace of TIME FLIGHT, came to the outside of the latter at the furlong pole, fought it out in determined fashion and just failed to be up in time. SUN APOLLO came through on the inside at the stretch turn and closed determinedly. GUSTO dropped back immediately after the start and closed with a belated rush in the stretch. TIME FLIGHT showed good speed for the first six furlongs, tiring thereafter. SABULA was never a factor.

SGT. BYRNE, away fast, dropped back slightly through the opening quarter-mile, moved up on the outside thereafter, came willingly in the stretch and was up in the closing stride. LADFIELD began moving up after swinging from the back stretch, saved ground at the last turn, wore down the leaders nearing the finish and just failed to last. SPIXI, in near pursuit of the leader nearing the stretch, fought it out courageously to the end. HAPPY GO showed good early speed, disposed of ADVISING ANNA and just weakened in the last couple of strides. ADVISING ANNA had good speed, but faltered in the closing test. ALL FORLORN weakened after a display of early speed. ERIN LAD faltered after going a quarter-mile. DREEL, away quickly, dropped back steadily.

Ring Commission Clears Goldstein After "No Contest" Affair

Ahearn, Referee Morris Censured; Levey's Purse Forfeited.

By Bill McCormick.

THE Boxing Commission yesterday sat in solemn conclave to consider the recent Bobby Goldstein-George Levey fiasco at Griffith Stadium, which was halted in the second round after both judges had declared the affair "no contest."

The commission completely exonerated Goldstein from any complicity in the matter; demanded that Levey show cause why his fighter's license should not be revoked; cautioned Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn, a brother of Goldstein's, to be more careful in making matches for Bobby in the future, and placed the onus for the misunderstandings resulting from the halting of the bout squarely on Referee Robert E. (Muggy) Morris.

Although the bout still will remain officially in the record books as "no contest," Goldstein was vindicated of any blame in the matter when the commission ordered that he be paid the entire amount of his purse, if any. The former Southern Conference and Intercollegiate champion was working on the card, which was a benefit, without pay, so there will be no purse to be paid him.

Fund Gets Purse.

Levey's purse, after his traveling expenses had been deducted, was ordered turned over to the Calhoun fund, for the benefit of which the card was held, and the commission by letter asked that Levey show cause why he should not be permanently barred here for making false statements in his sworn application for a license.

The commission, after hearing testimony from all concerned, informed Referee Morris that if he did not want the Goldstein-Levey match halted he should have instructed Announcer Jimmy Lake not to make any announcement that the affair had been declared "no contest." Morris was told that when he permitted Lake to step into the ring to hoist the "cease firing" signal, he acquiesced with the judges, who already had written across their slips "no contest."

Following the stopping of the fight, Morris, apparently incensed at what he considered the usurping of his authority by the judges, was loud in his protestations against the bout having been halted without his authority. The commission pointed out to him that he was in complete command of the ring and should not have allowed the announcement stopping the fight to be made if he was not in complete accord.

The commission told Morris also that after permitting the bout to be halted he should not have discussed the matter about the ringside as he did. Morris was reminded that one of the questions on the examination he took for his referee's license was worded to bring out the fact that a referee should not discuss decisions, or other actions in the ring, with the spectators following a bout. He also was reminded that this fact had been very forcibly brought out at lectures held to instruct referees here.

11th Inning Homers Win for Culpeper

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., July 31.—Two rousing eleventh-inning home runs on successive pitches gave Culpeper's Valley League champions a 6-to-4 decision over the Elks Club tossers here this afternoon. Fifteen hundred spectators saw the game.

The decisive blows came from the bats of Metheny and Herbie Hash, the latter a former Elk star. Another erstwhile Elk, Win Brown, produced Culpeper's tying run in the eighth when he tripled to deep right after Goldy Lowery had singled.

Today's victory gave Culpeper an even break in four game with the local club.

"Out Fishin'"

By Jack Hawley.

If the wind is in the North,
Forget your fishing and so forth.
If it shifts into the East
They're on a diet and won't feast.
If it swings into the South,
Hungry fish are all about.
But, if it switches to the West
They'll grab the buttons off your vest.

LATE Tuesday afternoon some excellent bluefishing was enjoyed by the seven boats remaining on Southwest Middles, all others having come to shore, thoroughly disgusted with their empty fish boxes. This is all a part of the sport in seeking out the elusive bluefish. One never knows where he is or when a large school may suddenly appear alongside the boat. The seven remaining boats landed from 15 to 30 blues per boat, all weighing from 4 to 6 pounds each.

The fish taken on the Middles this year are running large and are very fat. When using the word "Middles" or "Middle Grounds" many anglers are not aware that this expression comes from the true name "Kledges Straits Middle Ground," a hill running northwest and southwest approximately 30 feet below the surface of the water and the feeding ground for blues. However, there are many other feeding grounds equally as good and extend as far north as Shadyside, but perhaps are not so consistently good from July to September and usually run smaller in size.

Many anglers differ in this opinion, and rightly so, for the reason that blues are fast travelers and seek out their food only when it can be found in abundance. The Middle Grounds can be reached from various points, depending upon the time one wishes to travel on land and water. This writer believes that the quickest time can be made by taking route No. 5 out of Anacostia through to Ridge, Scotland Beach or Point Lookout, respectively, the latter being approximately 82 miles from Washington. This requires about two and one-half hours' driving and an additional hour and a half run by boat to the fishing grounds.

For the trout fisherman (sea trout) he will find Cornfield Harbor an ideal place for the big ones. This is a short run by boat from Point Lookout. The average price per day at the above places is $10.00 and the boatmen are very dependable and know their trade. Bait and ice are procurable at an icehouse near by and accommodations for meals and lodging are reasonable.

Next week this writer will list for your convenience the many points along the Eastern and Western Shores where easy access to fishing grounds can be had. Reports from Solomons Island, Kenwood Beach, Benedict, Piney Point, Tall Timbers, Cobb Island, Colonial Beach, Gloucester Point, Tilghman Island, Wachapreague, Smith Island and other points indicate a profitable week-end for all anglers. However, these reports contain mostly hardheads or croaker with few trout, spot and bluefish.

The croaker fisherman can look for much larger size fish, according to the present catches of commercial fishermen. Beginning August 1 through to October 1 (near the entrance to the bay later, December 1) fishing will be at its peak, favorable winds and tides being the controlling factor in practically all cases.

It is too early to make a satisfactory prediction of the conditions of fresh water streams for the coming week-end. At present they are in very poor condition and unless the unusual happens (clear weather) they will all remain so for several days, but it is hoped that fresh water anglers will get a break in their favor.

Continued waiting for clear crystal-like water for bass and pike is not in keeping with one's disposition, especially if on a much deserved vacation.

Herewith are a few items of necessity that every angler should have in his small medical kit (because one never knows when he is going to have the well-known stomach ache, headache, sunburn, blisters, bruises, burns, minor cuts, mosquitoes, etc.), adhesive tape, white vaseline, baking soda, laxative, aspirin, butsin picrate for sunburn, sterile gauze, mercurochrome, cotton and a small bottle of phenolated camphor.

All items can be put into a very small space and are valuable at all times to the constant fisherman. For sea sickness there is no cure. However, relief can be had by lying flat on the back over the center of the keel of the boat where there is less motion, cover the eyes with newspaper or other covering and go to shore immediately.

Fuchs Resigns As President Of Braves

Forfeits Stock Holdings to Adams Who Will Dispose of Club.

baseball men agree that a million will be needed to put the club on its feet.

Hands are Tied.

McKechnie's presidential hands will be tied, for Adams, head of a huge grocery chain, owner of two professional hockey teams and the real power in the new $2,000,000 Suffolk Downs race track in East Boston, firmly refuses to increase his baseball investment, which now stands him more than $100,000 in losses and the club will be forced to stagger along as best it can until Frick digs up a purchaser.

Several groups have been reported as dickering for the Braves since Fuchs' desperate financial plight became known. None of them, according to Adams, the only one authorized to sell the club, meant business.

Ever since the season started Frick has been trying to clean up the Braves' financial mess and the young league head, according to Adams, is about the only baseball figure capable of finding a satisfactory solution for this Boston problem.

After learning that Fuchs had retired, Frick, in New York, said "Adams will take over complete control of the club and I expect that he will make an active effort to sell it as soon as possible. I believe his chances of selling are considerably increased now that there is single ownership."

This opinion, however, does not coincide with Frick's last conference with Adams here several weeks ago. At that time Adams pointed out that the best interests of the National League demanded that Frick find a purchaser for the Braves, since his (Adams') limited time would not permit him to become involved in the dickering.

Although Fuchs' financial reverses are no secret to baseball circles, the Braves' books reveal that his investment in that club was a highly profitable one. Insiders allege that Fuchs invested but $35,000 in the club when he came to Boston ten years ago and since then has collected more than $300,000 as salary and expenses.

Adams, according to his own admission, entered the Braves picture when Fuchs pleaded with him to buy out a troublesome minority faction. From then on, conditions forced Adams to add to his holdings and, finally, when the club's financial credit was endangered, take over complete control. He is now eager to sacrifice more than $100,000 by selling out

McKechnie will continue as manager. His executive duties are expected to be light for Adams has several likely prospects in his own organization to care for the routine work in the Braves' front office.

Ferrell Clouts 2 Homers to Whip Nats

Red Sox Ace Scores 17th Victory of Season by 6-4 Edge.

Newsom forced Williams to pop up and then took Dahlgren's grounder into the box and ran Rick Ferrell down as he tried to score. But he couldn't negotiate that third out. That was the point at which Ferrell blasted his first homer into the bleachers.

The Nats remained in the ball game only because of Heinie Manush and Cecil Travis. This pair got Washington its first run in the fourth, when Manush tripled and Travis singled, and in the sixth they reversed the type of their hits to bring the Nats their second run.

Following Ferrell's homer that led off the seventh, Bishop tripled to the center field wall and scored on Almada's hit to boost the Sox's lead to 5-2.

Came the eighth and the last threat of the Nats. Powell walked, but Manush flied to left. Travis made his fourth hit, a single to center, and Red Kress scored Powell with a single to center. Cliff Bolton beat out a hit and Travis scored. With Kress on second, one out and a run needed to tie the score, Pinch Hitter Stone popped to Bishop and Kuhel fouled to Williams.

Ferrell won his ball game without any assistance from Manager Joe Cronin, who had a very poor day all around. Cronin, who went hitless in four times at bat, couldn't get a ball out of the infield. He popped up twice and took a third strike once. He made one of the two errors of the game and to complete his dismal day was picked off first base by Newsom with two out and the bases full.

Cecil Travis celebrated his return to the Washington line-up with a sensational batting spree. In four time at bat he drove out three singles and a triple and figured in all four of Washington's runs.

Chicago Takes Measure of Cleveland

Mel Harder's 2d and 3d Homers of Career Fail to Stop 6-4 Loss.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, July 31.—Mel Harder, Cleveland's curve ball artist, who had hit only one home run in his seven-year major league career, belted out two circuit drives today, but they failed to keep him from taking a 6-to-4 beating from the challenging Chicago White Sox.

Harder's long blows, achieved in consecutive times at bat in the fifth and seventh innings, gave the Indians a 4-to-2 lead. In the eighth, however, the Sox turned on the Cleveland ace with singles by Rip Radcliff, and Mule Haas, mixed with a triple by Tony Piet and Zeke Bonura's double, scoring two runs. He was replaced by Lloyd Brown, who promptly yielded a single from the bat of Vernon Washington, which drove in two more runs.

Babe Phelps gave the Indians eight hits in winning his fourth victory of the season. The defeat was Harder's eighth, against 14 triumphs.

Braves-Dodgers Split Two Games

Leslie's CloutWins Opener, Braves Take Second.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, July 31.—The Brooklyn Dodgers held to their fifth place in the National League by splitting a double-header with the Boston Braves today, taking the first, 5 to 3, and losing the nightcap, 4 to 0.

Sam Leslie's home run with Jimmy Bucher on base in the second inning provided the winning margin in the opening contest, as both the starting pitchers, Watson Clark and Danny MacFayden, failed to go the route.

In the second affair, the Dodgers were held to five hits by Fred Frankhouse, no two of them in one inning.

Upward Surge Carries Steel To 46 Per Cent

Volume of Orders From Unclassified Sources Is Impressive.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 31.—Continuing the rise which started early in the month, steel operations, Iron Age reported today, are up another 2 points to 46 per cent of capacity, the highest level since April. This marks the fourth consecutive weekly advance since the Independence Day period, and the steel trade looks for an even more pronounced upturn in August, according to the summary.

"Hardly less impressive than the increase in output," asserted the review, "is the pronounced strength of scrap, which has been manifested by price advances in virtually all market centers.

"The rise of scrap prices was prompted both by improved fall prospects for steel business and by the impressive contra-seasonal gains in the operating rates in leading producing centers.

"Though railroad steel has given mill operations added support of late, there has been little change in the relative contributions of leading sources of tonnage.

"Automotive demand, though on a reduced scale because of the season, is still at the head of the list owing to belated and unexpected requirements for old models.

"Steel consumption by farm implement and tractor plants is unabated, and demand from makers of machine tools and other forms of machinery is expanding.

"But the really impressive feature of the market is the continued growth of business from unclassified sources, with unlooked for orders appearing on a wide front.

"In view of the large part played by miscellaneous orders in boosting operations during July the steel trade looks for an even more pronounced upturn in August. At that time heavy buying for new model automobile production will mature and larger orders for construction will be placed, with other heavy tonnages to be awarded in the fall.

"Private building is showing gradual but steady improvement, and expanding farmer buying, in step with excellent crop prospects, has been reflected in larger purchases of galvanized sheets and wire products.

"The Iron Age composite price for scrap steel has risen to $11.58 a ton from $10.83 last week. This is the highest level since the last week in February."

Power Rates Cut By N. Y. Utilities

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 30.—Four electric companies of the consolidated gas system were authorized by the Public Service Commission today to reduce their rates by almost $7,000,000 a year, effective August 1.

The commission also voted conditional approval of a plan to consolidate the system's two largest operating companies, the New York Edison Co. and the United Electric Light & Power Co. The new unit would be known as the New York Edison Co., Inc.

Under the reduced rate schedules it was estimated that residential consumers would save about $3,615,000 a year, while retail commercial and other general users would benefit to the extent of $2,575,000.

Cut in Vineyards Decreed by France

By the Associated Press.

Paris, July 31.—The price of sugar was cut and a plan to pay vineyardists to destroy their vines—similar to New Deal crop restriction measures in the United States—was set up by decree today. Overproduction oppresses the sugar beet and wine industries and the decree is intended to relieve agriculture and help the country bear Premier Laval's economy program.

Budd Gets Loan Of $5,000,000

Car Firm Sees Growing Demand for High-Speed Rail Equipment.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Philadelphia, Pa., July 31.—Approval of a $5,000,000 loan to the Edward G. Budd Manufacturing Co. under the provisions of section 13(b) of the Federal Reserve act, as amended, was announced today. This is one of the largest loans thus far made under this provision. In a letter to stockholders asking consent to approve the loan, the Budd Co. wrote:

"We believe that we are facing a period of business improvement, and we have booked for the next year an increased volume of automobile body business. We anticipate a growing demand for streamlined, light-weight, high-speed railroad equipment. It is consequently essential that funds be obtained for the purpose of supplying additional working capital and for the payment of certain matured and maturing obligations."

The $5,000,000 loan, which is payable in 5 years, is secured by a first mortgage on the company's real property and the pledge of certain other assets. A meeting in order to obtain the consent of the common and preferred stockholders is being called for October 31. Pending the receipt of such consent, the Federal Reserve Bank of Philadelphia, in participation with local banks, will grant the loan on a temporary basis, when approved by the debenture holders.

Highlights and Background Of Financial News and Trends

Stocks Advance to New High Price Levels in Turnover of Nearly 2,000,000 Shares—Wheat Climbs—Bonds Mark Time.

By Carlton A. Shively.

New York, July 31.—Speculative markets advanced strongly, after an uncertain start, and generated fully as much bullish feeling as they used up. Turnover in stocks was the highest of the month, at around 1,800,000 shares, and the average price of industrial stocks rose to a new high level for the past two years. Gains of the leading issues were not large in most cases, but they were stubbornly held against profit-taking and bear forays. Bonds were narrow. Grains swept along, with September wheat rising 2¾ cents to 94½ cents a bushel.

No outstanding development accounted for the fresh advance in the stock market. It appeared to be rather the cumulative effect of favorable news, a portion being the reluctance of holders to sell stocks recently purchased and on which they have tempting profits. This week the professional bears made several attempts to unsettle the stock list, and profit taking of a desultory nature was indulged in, but the effect on prices was slight and temporary. That has encouraged fresh bull operations and brought in a growing number of public traders at home and abroad.

First impact of the United States Steel Corporation's report on the market was to press prices slightly, but the market soon realized that steel was operating in line with other major industries, namely, toward expanding business. The midweek reviews of the steel trade were especially bullish, telling of gains in steel orders from all directions and of a stiffening of scrap prices. The steel trade, says Iron Age, looks for a more pronounced upturn in August. Along with that went another market barometric reading, that of the price for hogs, which rose sharply.

Favorable News.

Certain dividend news and quarterly earnings statements also stimulated hopes of the bulls. Westinghouse's resumption was taken as a sign of confidence in the durable goods industries, and the revival of public utility shares was supposed by the public to mean that insiders felt more confident of their chances with Congress on the regulatory legislation. Production of electricity for last week was a little better than for the previous week and 8 per cent higher than for the corresponding period of last year. Railroad freight car loadings last week were under the previous week and a year ago.

This month has rounded out with an unchanged call money rate of one-quarter of 1 per cent, against a charge of 1 per cent a year ago. The difference is one of bank policy, largely, and not of practical interest to clients of the brokerage houses. Money is a good deal more plentiful than it was a year ago, and demand is if anything less; but even last year a quarter per cent call rate would have been justified by market conditions. Certain banks strove to hold the rate on the 1 per cent peg, nevertheless, and finally were forced out of their position by the press of outside money. Margin holders of stocks find the charge about the same on their debit balances. It ranges all the way from 2 per cent to 4 per cent, the difference going to the broker for what he considers his due as a service charge. Some bankers say they would not be surprised to see a call charge of one-eighth of 1 per cent, the same as prevailing in the London money market.

The gold currencies responded buoyantly to news that Hendrik Colijn, who headed the Dutch cabinet which resigned last week, had finally succeeded in forming a new cabinet, and that one of the objectives of the new government would be the defense of the Dutch currency. Today, with a rally of 30 points, the guilder did not seem to need much defending. The French franc jumped more than a point and the discount on franc futures went down to 12 points for 90 days, against 14 yesterday and 17 on Monday. Swiss francs also rose sharply. Sterling was little changed, though Italy was reported to be in the market for pounds again to pay for more war materials.

New High Prices.

In stocks the trading was not uniformly toward higher prices, but rallies on the declines and numerous leading issues sold at new high prices for the year. Steel common was out front on that score. In the middle of the day the public utility shares, laggards for the past several days, revived and their advances stimulated a general recovery. Railroad issues were less noticeable than they were yesterday, but they, nevertheless, retained a good deal of activity and made some further gains. Central led in selling at the best price since the first week of January.

The motor group was calmer, but operations in Studebaker went steadily ahead. New highs were set by General Motors and Chrysler. The price touched a new top of 4 on the recovery. Of the leading issues, Consolidated Gas gave the most heartening performance, reaching a new peak, as did also North American. Telephone sold at the best price in two years. Western Union jumped 3 points.

Mail orders and farm implements were sharply higher, but Minneapolis-Moline and Oliver were exceptions. Tobaccos, foods, rubbers, oils, chemicals, amusements and metals were firm to fractionally higher, but kept in the background. Rail and motor equipment were well taken.

Com. Credit Net Jumps to $2.61

Baltimore, Md., July 31.—The consolidated semi-annual report of Commercial Credit Co. just issued shows net income from operations, after charging off or providing reserves for all losses and doubtful items, Federal and other taxes, and credited to earned surplus for the six months ended June 30, 1935, $3,345,266.25, compared with $2,379,567.33 for the same period of 1934.

After payment of regular dividends of $727,077.74 on all issues of the old preferred stocks (including Commercial Credit Trust), outstanding during the period but since retired and after deducting $3,563.89 income on minority common shares of subsidiaries, there remained $2,614,624.62, or $2.61 per share, applicable to the average number of shares of common stock outstanding upon which dividends were paid during the six months' period of 1935, compared with $1,649,847.02, or $1.72 per share for the same period of 1934.

Berlin—Although business on the boerse was dull today, the price trend remained steady. Prices closed sustained.

Building Doubles, Retail Sales Gain, Business Failures Decline.

Richmond, Va., July 31 (AP).—Favorable developments appeared to outnumber unfavorable business trends in the Fifth Federal Reserve District during June and early July, the monthly business summary made public today by the reserve bank here indicated.

A gain of 5.5 per cent in retail trade, good prospects for agriculture, the fewest number of business failures, both in number and total liabilities, of any June since 1920 and improvement in the lagging construction field were cited as encouraging factors.

Debits to individual bank accounts showed an increase of 12.2 per cent as of July 10 compared with four weeks ended July 11, 1934. Aggregate debits for the first half of 1935 increased 10.7 per cent over the corresponding 1934 period.

Bankruptcies for the six-month period this year declined 27 per cent in number and 47 per cent in liabilities in comparison with the same time in 1934.

After a maximum rise of 4½ cents, the Chicago wheat market closed unsettled, 2⅝@3¼ above yesterday's finish, September, 94⅛@94⅝; corn, ⅝ off to 1⅞ up; September, 76⅛@76¼; oat, ⅛@1⅞ advanced, and provisions varying from 5 cents decline to 30 cents gain.

On The Air Today

Advance notices on new shows planned for the fall continue to arrive. The latest crop produces "The Rendezvous Musical," to open on N. B. C. September 18 featuring Jane Williams, Phil Duey, Men About Town and Aldo Ricci and his orchestra. Helen Hayes will be starred in a series of half-hour dramatic programs (N. B. C.) beginning October 1 and employing a new technique in the presentation of a well-known stage personality. And last but not least, Al Pearce and His Gang graduate to a night spot beginning August 9.

Even Uncle Jim Harkins, mayor of Town Hall's Bedlamville, is going to do things differently. Fred Allen's successor is starting a series of preliminary amateur contests. The first was held last night in Philadelphia and others will follow in Boston, Buffalo, Cleveland and other cities. Washington does not appear on the list. Winners in these preliminaries will appear on the Town Hall programs.

And finally, WOL has become contest-minded through its perennial favorite, Joe Brown, of Kiddies Hour distinction. Joe is starting a Baby Beauty contest. And the first, so far as WOL knows, ever conducted by radio. All you have to do is send the photograph of the baby contestant to Joe Brown at WOL before Wednesday, August 21. Ten pictures will be selected as the finalists on Joe Brown's program, August 25. A silver cup will be presented to the winner, who will be expected to cry, coo or otherwise demonstrate his feelings on the occasion of his first looking a mike in the eye.

WJSV reports that a number of persons have phoned to inquire whether the canary singing contest is bona fide. That confirms my conviction that the contest is the latest word in super, colossal, stupendous, etc., feature events. But the answer to the question of its seriousness is that no contest ever was undertaken with more dignity and aplomb. Canary owners may take their tongues out of their cheeks and enter their songsters in the contest without fear of its being a gag. Entries must be on file with WJSV by Saturday of this week. The birds will compete on the Sun Dial next week.

Speaking of graduations—let's salute Gordon Hittenmark, of WRC, who henceforth will come from behind the mask of anonymity and be himself, instead of "Your Timekeeper." Paul Munroe subs for Hittenmark Friday and Saturday of this week.

A British radio announcer Tuesday night, about 11 p. m., Washington time, said as he announced "The Washington Post March" as the next number that he hoped someone in the American Capital would be listening. Short-wave fans were listening all right. They reported by telephone direct to The Post city room. And many thanks, too.

• • • •

Laurette Taylor, of the stage, will do a bit of "Peg o' My Heart" in Rudy Vallee's hour tonight, WRC, at 7 . . . Deems Taylor also guests with Vallee . . . Add feature events: A broadcast direct from an outrigger canoe in the surf at Waikiki Beach with Duke Kahanahoku describing the activities will be a part of Kate Smith's hour, WJSV, at 7.

• • • •

Three office workers in a huge rubber factory in Connecticut make their first professional radio appearance in "Air Breaks" today, WRC, at 12:30 p. m. They will be known as the "Three Happy Sisters" (the surname really is Happy). But the interesting feature is that the factory will close down for half an hour—to the last cam and cog—in order that fellow workers may listen.

The first international broadcast in connection with Olympic Games, opening in Germany next summer, will be presented from WJSV, at 4 p. m., from Berlin . . . Finale: Many thanks for the telephone and written suggestions for questions in "Curbstone Queries." Keep them coming. J. H. H.

Old Line Stock Insurance Protection Is Like A Grade-A-Bond

Both are intangible assets, promises of a future payment of money, which you lay aside for the rainy day that inevitably comes.

With the new District of Columbia Auto Insurance Responsibility Law becoming effective today, it's more important than ever that you should immediately be fully safeguarded with this dependable type of insurance protection.

The first important step of course is to consult the local agent of a responsible old-line Stock Insurance Company.

There are many of these sincere professional men in Washington—men who know insurance from the ground up—have made it their life's work.

Feel free to consult any of them confident of unquestioned integrity, sound advice, the ability to see the purchaser's viewpoint, and an all-absorbing desire to serve.

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office.

By Morgan Baker.

TWO veteran Federal employes retired yesterday after piling up a total of 100 years service with the Government. Each had reached the compulsory retirement age of 70.

BAKER.

When Charles Moss closed his desk late yesterday afternoon in the archives and claims branch of the Washington Quartermaster Depot he put an end to 53 continuous years of Federal employment, beginning in 1884 when he entered the service as a soldier.

H. L. Peckham, who retired officially yesterday from the Hydrographic Office of the Navy Department, where he was senior engineer, nautical, had not been in his office for the last few weeks. He departed on leave more than a month ago.

Peckham began his Government service in 1883 when he entered the United States Naval Academy but, unlike Moss, did not serve continuously. He left the Navy in 1889 and for four years had no connection with the Government. Then in 1893 he went into the Coast Guard, remaining until the close of the Spanish-American War in 1898. Two years later he reentered Government service, this time as nautical expert with the Hydrographic Office, and stayed there until he went on leave a few weeks ago.

Moss also saw active service with his country's military forces. Soon after joining the Army in 1884 he took part in the Indian campaigns in the West. Before retiring with the rank of sergeant 30 years later he was in the Spanish-American conflict. When he left his office at the quartermaster depot yesterday employes of the Archives and Claims Division presented him with a gift. Peckham was similarly honored when he left the Hydrographic Office.

Moss, who resides at 3405 Prospect avenue northwest, plans to leave Washington soon with Mrs. Moss for Louisiana, where they will live with their daughter.

Employes of Securities and Exchange Commission will hold their first annual dinner dance tonight at the Shoreham Hotel, beginning at 8.

Diary Guest Tickets.

IF F, P or C follows your name in this column, call in person on the Federal Diary editor today only between 3:30 and 5 p. m. You will receive tickets to one of the following Loew's theaters: F, Loew's Fox (stage, 12 Aristocrats, with Francette Malloy and other acts; screen, Spencer Tracy and Virginia Bruce in "The Murder Man:" or to P, Loew's Palace (Shirley Temple and John Boles in "Curly Top"); or to C, Loew's Columbia (third week of William Powell and Louise Rainer in "Escapade").

An applicant for the position of special agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, admitting that he lacked the necessary qualifications, argued that he should nevertheless be appointed, saying:

"——because I am known not to fit the requirements I would never be suspected of being a special agent."

Springfield Makes Bid.

If a resolution just received at national headquarters of the National Federation of Federal Employes is acted upon favorably at the forthcoming biennial convention at Yellowstone National Park, Springfield, Ill., will be host to the convention of the organization. This was announced last night by Miss Gertrude McNally, national secretary-treasurer, who indicated that Miami and Cleveland also were bidders for the 1937 conclave.

Members of the office staff of Bradish J. Carroll, jr. (F), NRA executive who will retire September 1, will honor him at a luncheon at 1:30 p. m. Saturday at the Ro-Car, 1601 Twenty-first street northwest.

New Navigational Instrument.

Thomas L. Sprague (P), Navy, is the designer of a navigational instrument which has several objects in addition to providing means for inspecting so-called win triangles. It provides an instrument to show the magnetic courses to steer and one to solve readily all so-called mooring board problems.

Government Printing Office Legion Post, No. 33, reports a good attendance at its carnival and exposition which is now in full swing at Second and F streets northeast.

SUCCESS of the small housing scheme in Stockholm, Sweden, one of the most satisfactory housing projects carried out under public auspices in post-war years, is attributed largely to strict adherence to the merit system in selecting administrative personnel.

The American Federation of Government Employes yesterday obtained a report of a thorough investigation of the project made by Axel H Oxholm, former chief of Forest Products Division, Commerce. Mr. Oxholm speaks of the "Stockholm system" as "unquestionably the most successful in Europe."

It has provided homes for approximately 50,000 people since 1922, in the suburbs of Stockholm, and these homes, equipped with all modern comforts and conveniences, have been provided at a lower cost than any other housing ever attempted in a comparable locality.

Mr. Oxholm thus comments on the civil service aspects of this project:

"The development of the small-housing scheme has been entrusted to the Small-Housing Bureau, an organization created especially for this purpose. The staff and executives were chosen on the basis of their technical knowledge and other qualifications. No outside influence has been permitted to interfere in this program, which, for years, has followed the same policy regardless of changes in the city administration. Unquestionably these conditions are largely responsible for the outstanding success of the venture.

Charles Moss was honored by fellow employes of the Archives and Claims Branch of the Washington Quartermaster Depot at Fort Myer, Va., when he retired yesterday after 53 years of Government service on reaching the retirement age. Edgar S. Horner, principal clerk of the branch, is shown making a presentation to Moss with Mrs. Moss at the right, with members of the office staff in the background.

HENRY L. PECKHAM,

officially retired yesterday from Hydrographic Office, Navy, after many years Government service, including five years with the Coast Guard.

"The Small-House Bureau of Stockholm is a part of the real estate department of the municipality. The bureau develops the standardized-house plans and attends to all details of construction as well as the purchase and distribution of building materials."

Miss Portia G. Webster (F), General Crops Section, AAA, is preparing to sail for Puerto Rico August 6, where she will be stationed as assistant to the director of the agricultural experiment station.

Sirovich Bill Not Dead.

Q. Where can I obtain a copy of the book on activities of the Department of Agriculture which was described in The Federal Diary recently? Mrs. C. McD. (C).

A. Copies of the latest issue of the Agriculture Yearbook may be purchased from the superintendent of documents, Government Printing Office.

Q. I have a CAF 4 rating and desire to take an accounting examination to transfer to another department. How can this be arranged? G. (F).

A. Consult the personnel officer of the agency to which you wish to be transferred and he will take the matter up with the Civil Service Commission.

Q. Why was the Sirovich Government personnel bill killed? File Clerk, (C).

A. The Sirovich bill is not dead. The sub-committee of the House Civil Service Commission will meet in executive session today to consider the measure.

Richmond Candidates Opposed to Sales Tax

Richmond, Va., July 31 (AP).—The Richmond Retail Merchants Association today revealed statements showing the city's 14 candidates for the State Senate and House to be opposed almost unanimousiy to enactment of a sales tax except as a last resort.

All said they were opposed to any increase in State taxation, seven suggested a decrease and the remainder asked "a more equitable distribution," with more revenues to come to localities.

Game Law Fines Imposed.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., July 31.—A woman and three men have been fined for violations of game laws in this district, District Protector Tull Whitacre reports. The woman, Mrs. Milton B. Bayha, of Wheeling, was fined $20 and costs for fishing without a license.

Princess Anne Wheat Yields 32 Bu. an Acre

Princess Anne, Md., July 31 (AP).—An average wheat yield of 32 bushels an acre was reported by Charles Speights, Westover farmer, following the harvesting of this year's crop. Speights said he thrashed 770 bushels of wheat from 24 acres.

Many farmers in the county have reported, however, crops yielding less than the average of 20 bushels an acre. The selling price for this season was 75 cents a bushel, the second lowest figure in the last 40 years in this section.

Crash Victim Dies.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., July 31.—Maxwell Lewis, 21-year-old Washington Negro, died in Mary Washington Hospital today due to injuries sustained three weeks ago when an automobile laden with illegal liquor, which he was driving, overturned here.

The Once-Over

By H. I. Phillips.

Weather Report.

(As it always looks when you are about to start on your vacation.)

Local Forecast—Cloudy with showers. The low area which has hung over the city for the past week is moving very slowly. Conditions indicate continued rain, fog, high temperature and record-breaking humidity.

* * * *

Middle Atlantic States—Generally cloudy conditions are prevailing over this area, with thunder showers of great violence. There has been a record rainfall during the past few days and the outlook is for further downpours all next week. Floods and washouts have closed many highways to traffic, and it will be at least a month before normal travel can be resumed in many sections.

* * * *

New Jersey—Conditions favor rain for the next 72 hours, due to a low area which has moved in from the Southwest. Another low area which developed over Ohio is heading this way and should arrive toward the end of the week, bringing heavy rain and squalls. A disturbance of some intensity is developing off the coast. The most severe lightning storms in 25 years have been causing great damage, particularly in the vacation areas, where six of the larger summer hotels have been struck and destroyed by fire this week. All railroads are running on a curtailed schedule.

* * * *

New York and Pennsylvania forecast—Thunderstorms, followed by heavy rain Monday and Tuesday; Wednesday, rain and fog; Thursday, rain; Friday and Saturday, probably rain.

* * * *

New England—The forecast for today and tomorrow is rain in all parts of the New England States. The cloudbursts over Maine, Massachusetts and Connecticut during the past week have done more damage than at first calculated and stranded more than 500,000 summer vacationists in some of the popular tourist resorts.

* * * *

Countrywide Conditions.

Washington — The disturbance that was central over eastern Ontario last night is sweeping southeasterly across the country with increasing intensity. Another disturbance is moving from the Southwest. Violent storms have occurred everywhere between the Rocky Mountains and the Mississippi. Heavy gales have swept the Great Lakes. In Colorado floods have wiped out dozens of dude ranches. Tourist camps between the Mississippi and the Atlantic Coast have been advised to put up the storm shutters and batten down the hatch. No material change in the weather is looked for before October.

Owed to Rain.

Are a blessing in disguise—
They shrink my roommate's flannel suits
Exactly to my size!

Sam Michael Gevins.

It begins to look as if the next war would be between Germany and Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia of New York.

The Treasury Department favors issuing some half-cent and one-mill coins. This is pretty certain to be pretty tough on church collections.

And it is going to seem strange to have a man come in and say, "Can you change a cent, mister?" no matter how bad business may be.

A horse called Stocks won a race at the Empire City track at 10 to 1. It was probably a technical rally.

Culbertson on Bridge

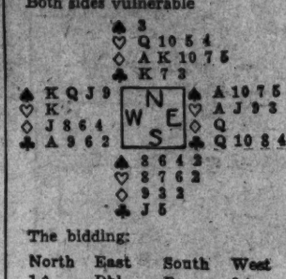
Twice Bid Values.

One of the oldest axioms of bridge is that the same values can not be bid twice. When a player has shown the full strength of his hand by any bid, he must refuse to rebid except in response to a force and even then he must choose some bid which denies further strength.

In the deal below, played in a duplicate tournament, players who observed this principal made a game and players who forgot it bid a slam and were set.

North, Dealer
Both sides vulnerable



The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1◇	Dbl.	Pass	2♠
Pass	3♠	Pass	4♣
Pass	4♠	Pass	Pass
Pass

East stretched his hand somewhat when he doubled one diamond, but his major suit strength and support for all unbid suits made the double almost obligatory. West, of course, had hope of a Slam, knowing that East must be short in diamonds. It is true, if East's double had been a particularly strong one, a Slam could have been made, but East "went very slowly" after his double. After West's jump response of two spades, East bid only three spades, which showed no added values except spade support. West then made a Slam try by bidding four clubs and East avoided the temptation to bid four hearts, showing his biddable suit, or to bid five clubs, showing club support. Instead, East simply signed off at four spades and there the hand was played. Where other Easts responded to four clubs with any bid except four spades West immediately contracted for six spades and was defeated one or two tricks.

The Play.

In the play five-odd were made. After the opening lead of the King of diamonds North shifted to a spade and West won and led a low club. The King went up and a club came back. But West now proceeded to set up the dummy. He won the Ace of clubs in his own hand and ruffed a diamond with the ten of spades, returning to his King of hearts. He ruffed another diamond with the Ace of spades. Then he drew three more rounds of trumps discarding dummy's two losing hearts on the last two, leaving dummy with the Ace of hearts and two established clubs to win the remaining three tricks.

Fireman Hurt in Fall.

Richard W. Holmes, 26, a District fireman, was injured yesterday when he fell from the second floor of the firehouse at New Jersey avenue and M street northwest while he was washing windows.
